Tabled for revision, concerns about the service-learning component of the course

Russian and Slavic changes: Russian 250, course change request Change of description

Approved, contingent:

- To ensure transparency and limit overlap with the 350 course, a recommended title would be "19th Century Literature in Translation." (It is stated that this course is intended to cover only 19th century literature).
- Add GEC language to the syllabus, including the category it is in and the criteria that it addresses.
- Clarify the distinction between the final exams and the 1-hour exams.

Russian 520, course change request Change of title and description

Approved, contingent:

- Following the Arts and Sciences trends of the past few years, the committee strongly suggests that you list, at a minimum, English 110 as a prerequisite. (This is a 500-level course and should have some prerequisites).
- Academic misconduct and disability services statements should be included on the syllabus (template can be found on our website).
- A chart of the breakdown of the percentages should be added -- for example, 20% attendance and participation, 20% quizzes, etc.

Russian 522, course change request Change of title and description

Approved, contingent:

- Objectives should be listed on the syllabus.
- A minimum prerequisite of English 110 should be added (see Russian 520).
- Describe the group project in more detail.
