

Title Change for English 398

Proposed Change: from “Critical Writing” to “Writing for English Majors”

The English faculty has met and supports the title change of English 398 to “Writing for English Major.” We desire for our majors to understand the importance of taking this course early in their tenure and we have found that students are putting off taking this course because its current title does not convey its centrality to learning the critical writing and reading practices in a timely manner. The course goals will remain the same, emphasizing writing and critical reading skills. I have supplied a syllabus with the updated title, current plagiarism and disability statements. We wish for this change to take effect in the Spring of '09, if possible.
