Program Learning Goals

Note: these are required for all undergraduate degree programs and majors now, and will be required for all graduate and professional degree programs in 2012. Nonetheless, all programs are encouraged to complete these now.

Program Learning Goals

- Understanding the literature and cultures of ancient Greece and Rome in their historical setting (“historical competence”)
- An ability to work on a topic in ancient literatures and cultures by making use of the documents of these cultures
- Understanding the role the literatures and cultures of ancient Greece and Rome have played in the history of Western civilization up to the present day
- Developing the ability of dealing with cultures that are foreign both in place and in time, using the cultures, literatures and religions of Greece and Rome as case studies (“cultural competence”)
- Language competence in Greek and/or Latin, i.e. (i) the competence to read and translate ancient Greek and/or Latin texts, and (ii) the ability to analyze and explain Greek and/or Latin sentences in terms of grammar and syntax
- For the concentrations b-d: the ability to explain an ancient Greek and/or Latin literary text
- For the concentrations b-d: the ability to work on a topic in ancient literatures and cultures by making use of original documents.

Assessment

Assessment plan includes student learning goals, how those goals are evaluated, and how the information collected is used to improve student learning. An assessment plan is required for undergraduate majors and degrees. Graduate and professional degree programs are encouraged to complete this now, but will not be required to do so until 2012.

Is this a degree program (undergraduate, graduate, or professional) or major proposal? Yes

Does the degree program or major have an assessment plan on file with the university Office of Academic Affairs? Yes

Summarize how the program's current quarter-based assessment practices will be modified, if necessary, to fit the semester calendar.

We have thoroughly assessed all its courses as to their contributions to the program goals; we dropped a number of deactivated courses, rethought the systematics of our course system, and introduced new courses (marked by* in the following course list) in order: To fill a gap perceived in the systematics of the coursework

- CL3104 The Ancient Novel: the novel is the only major genre missing from the quarter courses
- CL4501 The Good Life: Ancient Ethical Philosophy: ethical philosophy is a major topic not present among the quarter courses
- CL3203 War in Ancient Greece and Rome: war was a major occupation on ancient man, and a major topic of ancient literatures
- GR5016 Readings in Greek Philosophy: corresponds to the already existing Lat5016: Roman Philosophy
- GR5017 Later Greek Prose: corresponds to the already existing Lat 5018: Post-class. Lat.

To respond to new developments in the field:

- CL3201 Experiencing the Ancient Mediterranean City: ancient urbanism has become an important topic in research and a field where comparison with the present are very fruitful
- CL4101 Classical Receptions: the reception of ancient authors and topic in the modern world has become a major field of research
- CL5101 Classical Literature: Theoretical Perspectives: the need to know theories and methodologies has become much more explicit in contemporary ancient studies
- CL5401 Methodologies for the Study of Ancient Religions: the same

To offer topics that resonate with contemporary preoccupations of the students

- CL3202 I, Caesar: Roman emperors have become interesting in contemporary culture
- To create a more consistent offer in studies abroad courses, we reactivated the two study tour courses CL5798 and assigned the Study Abroad component to the course CL5798.2 "Study Tour: Abroad "; these courses will be taught in May and use several of our new or existing courses as prereqs (CL3201.1/2 "Experiencing the Ancient Roman City" and CL5302 "Studies in Greek and Roman Topography)

Program Specializations/Sub-Plans

If you do not specify a program specialization/sub-plan it will be assumed you are submitting this program for all program specializations/sub-plans.

Pre-Major

Does this Program have a Pre-Major? No

RE: Semester Conversion: Program Proposals

Dear Provost Alutto,

The Department of Greek and Latin proposes its existing programs for approval for semester conversion (see the attached course proposals):

- a. Undergraduate BA degree programs
 - Classics Major, with the following concentrations
 - i. Classical Humanities
 - ii. Classical Greek
 - iii. Latin
 - iv. Greek and Latin
 - Ancient History and Classics Major
 - Modern Greek Major
- b. Undergraduate Minors
 - Classics Minor
 - Classical Greek Minor
 - Latin Minor
 - Modern Greek Minor
- c. M.A. and Ph.D. in Greek and Latin, with the following specializations
 - M.A. in Modern Greek
 - M.A. in Classics
 - Ph.D. in Modern Greek
 - Ph.D. in Classics
- d. Graduate Interdisciplinary Specialization in Ancient Mediterranean Religions.

Conversion Procedure: The Department used the calendar conversion for a thorough reappraisal of its course offerings, both on the Undergraduate and the Graduate Level. The conversion process involved the entire faculty and was led by a Conversion Committee consisting of the Department Chair, the Directors for Undergraduate and for Graduate Studies, and the Graduate

Secretary; the Committee planned the process, conceptualized many of the changes and did all the clerical work.

A one-day faculty retreat in Fall '09 was dedicated to a thorough discussion of our program offerings and our future aims and goals. We decided that

- all the existing programs could be converted to the semester calendar
- the graduate program needed more a serious overhaul on its introductory level that continued and finished the revision of the program that had started in AY 2007/8 with the program assessment
- most of the existing courses could be transferred 1:1
- the course offerings needed systematization and supplementation on all levels to comply with changed educational needs and disciplinary development in research.

The Graduate and the Undergraduate Studies Committees developed proposals for new courses that were then reviewed by the Conversion Committee. Two faculty meetings in April and May '10 reviewed and approved the final form of the proposals. The Modern Greek Program served as a pilot to the College of Arts and Humanities; its final conversion was finished by the end of May '10; for the rest of the programs, the Conversion Committee developed the detailed entries for each course during the months of June and July '10.

Major Changes: The revision confirmed that the existing programs as such were viable and would correspond to our needs and aims in the near and mid-term future, albeit with changes and systematization among the courses.

The existing programs – undergraduate Majors and Minors and the Graduate Programs (see page 1) – were kept in place and converted to the new credit hour requirements. The changes concerned mainly the systematization and supplementation of the intermediate and advanced level reading courses, the introduction of new courses in order to respond to changed pedagogical and/or disciplinary needs, and the retooling of the introductory level courses for the graduate program, whereas the programs were converted 1:1 (with structural changes only in the Graduate Program, see below). I thus present the courses in a overview that looks across the programs.

- On the undergraduate level (all the Majors and Minors, except Modern Greek), we systematized the offerings of mid-level and advanced reading courses for Majors and Minors so as to cover all major areas of Greek and Roman literature, including late antique, medieval and Byzantine authors (this opening to later epochs of the advanced reading courses is new and corresponds to the development of research in our disciplines); the mid-level reading courses were brought into a sequence of four semesters, whereas the advanced reading courses were adapted to new scholarly developments, especially the interest in later antiquity.
- Again on the undergraduate level (including Modern Greek), we introduced several new general courses (some of them for the GEC) that respond to new developments in student interest and disciplinary research. To respond to a growing interest in material culture, we developed a group of courses on the Mediterranean City (CL3201) that would also be prerequisites for Study Tours to Greece and Italy during Maymester that in their turn have been rethought (CL5798); we also cross-listed several courses with History of Art that concern Greek and Roman art and archaeology. In order to take account of the growing interest in the reception of antiquity, we introduced several new courses – on the reception of ancient literature (CL 4101), on the development of Latin to Romance languages and on the transformation of Latin literature after antiquity up to the present day (CL3000). In order to respond to the growing influence of theory and the growing sophistication of theoretical approaches, we developed two courses for advanced UG and beginning graduate students that concentrate on theory in the study of ancient literature (CL5101) and of ancient religions (CL5401); current ethical and societal concerns finally will be addressed in the courses on ancient warfare (CL3203) and ancient ethical philosophy (CL4501).

- In the graduate program (both Modern Greek and Classics), we restricted admission of graduate students to the Ph.D. program only, thus reducing the M.A. program to a voluntary (terminal) status: this helps to reduce the number of exams and to focus much more on a wide training of our graduate students in research. It thus takes into account the recent development of this department from a program some of whose graduates chose a career as High School Latin teachers for whom the M.A. was a precondition, to a program that is research focused and competes with the leading programs in our fields (see the NRC assessment).
- On the introductory level of the graduate program (Classics only), we reduced the number of Prose Composition Courses from four to two and expanded the scope of our survey courses in order to accommodate both the need for an intensified language and translation training and for a survey of the major developments in the history of ancient literature; in the past, these two conflicting goals proved difficult to handle.
- On the graduate level, we reorganized the system graduate research seminars: instead of a large number of narrowly defined topics, we now offer one generic graduate research seminar in Greek and in Latin, and several special topics seminars in Classics (i.e. as interdisciplinary seminars without a strict language requirement) or in Greek and Latin in the areas of cultural studies and special training that constitute the strength of our program (epigraphy, paleography, religion, linguistics).
- Overall, the revision of all our course offerings led to the realization that we had many inactive courses on our books; the vast majority of them were taken off, very few were reactivated in a somewhat changed form.

Minor Changes: The detailed revision led to a number of minor changes. I highlight only those that concern the credit hours:

- Our introductory language sequences (GR/LAT/MGR 1101/1102) need to be offered in daily classroom teaching, as we did in the quarters system. This leads to a higher need of credit hours than the standard 3 crs/course, and we propose 5crs. This proposal has been discussed and accepted by all the foreign language chairs who are confronted with a similar situation.
- Our Graduate Student Survey courses of Greek and Latin Literature, the very core of our Graduate introductory teaching, have been expanded to cover both a thorough training in the languages and in the history of the two literatures from the beginnings to late antiquity; this expansion corresponds to our emphasis on thorough professionalization of our students,. But this needs more time than our previous courses, and we propose 5 crs/semester for these courses.

- Profiting from the new system of course numbers, we made our own numbering system more rational.

Review policy: Our departmental program review is a regular task of the Directors of Undergraduate and Graduate Studies and their committees who propose major changes to the department for a common decision; we also reviewed our programs more formally in response to the last external review. The regular course review is primarily a task of the chair who uses data provided by enrollments statistics, SEIs and discursive student feedback, and classroom visits (in which he is assisted by the Teaching Evaluation Committee); if changes seem necessary, they are proposed to the department through the Undergraduate and Graduate Studies Committees.

I propose all the above mentioned programs for approval.

Yours sincerely

1. PROGRAM:

Classics Major (BA in Classics), with the following concentrations:

- a. Classical Humanities
- b. Classical Greek
- c. Latin
- d. Greek and Latin

2. UNIT RESPONSIBLE:

Department of Greek & Latin

3. PROGRAM GOALS:

The program goals are partly identical, in some points however specifically different in the four concentrations:

Overall goals:

- A. Understanding the literature and cultures of ancient Greece and Rome in their historical setting (“historical competence”)
- B. An ability to work on a topic in ancient literatures and cultures by making use of the documents of these cultures
- C. Understanding the role the literatures and cultures of ancient Greece and Rome have played in the history of Western civilization up to the present day
- D. Developing the ability of dealing with cultures that are foreign both in place and in time, using the cultures, literatures and religions of Greece and Rome as case studies (“cultural competence”)

Concentration specific goals:

- E. For the concentrations b-d: language competence in Greek and/or Latin, i.e. (i) the competence to read and translate ancient Greek and/or Latin texts, and (ii) the ability to analyze and explain Greek and/or Latin sentences in terms of grammar and syntax.
- F. For the concentrations b-d: the ability to explain an ancient Greek and/or Latin literary text
- G. For the concentrations b-d: the ability to work on a topic in ancient literatures and cultures by making use of original documents.
- H. For the concentration a, which is a concentration without language competency, the overall goals apply.

4. CONVERSION:

- a. The program retains all its overall program goals, and has made only the minimal changes to curriculum requirements that are the result of the new calendar framework.
- b. The Dept. of Greek and Latin has thoroughly assessed all its courses as to their contributions to the program goals; we definitely dropped a number of deactivated courses, rethought the systematics of our course system, and introduced new courses (marked by* in the following course list) in order
 - To fill a gap perceived in the systematics of the coursework
 - CL3104 The Ancient Novel: the novel is the only major genre missing from the quarter courses
 - CL4501 The Good Life: Ancient Ethical Philosophy: ethical philosophy is a major topic not present among the quarter courses
 - CL3203 War in Ancient Greece and Rome: war was a major occupation of ancient man, and a major topic of ancient literatures
 - GR5016 Readings in Greek Philosophy: corresponds to an already existing LAT course (Latin 5016: Roman Philosophy)
 - GR5017 Later Greek Prose: corresponds to an already existing LAT course (Latin 5018: Post-classical Latin)
 - To respond to new developments in the field:
 - CL3201 Experiencing the Ancient Mediterranean City: ancient urbanism has become an important topic in research and a field where comparison with the present are very fruitful
 - CL4101 Classical Receptions: the reception of ancient authors and topic in the modern world has become a major field of research
 - CL5101 Classical Literature: Theoretical Perspectives: the need to know theories and methodologies has become much more explicit in contemporary ancient studies
 - CL5401 Methodologies for the Study of Ancient Religions: the same
 - To offer topics that resonate with contemporary preoccupations of the students
 - CL3202 I, Caesar: Roman emperors have become interesting in contemporary culture
 - To create a more consistent offer in studies abroad courses, we reactivated the two study tour courses CL5798 and assigned the Study Abroad component to the course CL5798.2 "Study Tour: Abroad "; these courses will be taught in May and use several of our new or existing courses as prerequisites (CL3201.1/2 "Experiencing the Ancient Roman City" and CL5302 "Studies in Greek and Roman Topography").

LAT5018 Reading in Post-Classical Latin
LAT5030 Special Topics in Latin Literature

4. Required courses for concentration (d) Greek and Latin selects at least 3 courses (9 credits) from the 2000 level, 2 courses (6 credits) beyond the 2000 level in any combination of the Greek and Latin courses listed above under items 2 and 3. The remaining 15 hours will consist of relevant elective courses chosen in consultation with the major advisor, and/or further Latin and Greek courses at the 2000-level and above.

c. Electives

1. Electives for concentration (a) Classical Humanities: 5 courses (15 credits) above the 2000 level, to be selected from the same list of courses, or from courses offered by History (Ancient History), Art History (Greek, Roman and Byzantine Art) , Philosophy, Theater, or the Greek and Latin concentration. *A maximum of 3 courses can come from outside the department.
2. Electives for concentration (b) Classical Greek: 5 courses (15 credits) above the 2000 level, to be selected from the same list of courses, or from appropriate courses offered by History (Ancient History), Art History (Greek, Roman and Byzantine Art) , Philosophy, Theater, or the Classical Humanities and Latin concentrations. *A maximum of 3 courses can come from outside the department.
3. Electives for concentration (c) Latin: 5 courses (15 credits) above the 2000 level, to be selected from the same list of courses, or from appropriate courses offered by History (Ancient History), Art History (Greek, Roman and Byzantine Art) , Philosophy, Theater, or the Classical Humanities and Greek concentrations. *A maximum of 3 courses can come from outside the department.
4. Electives for concentration (d) Greek and Latin: 5 courses (15 credits) above the 2000 level, to be selected from the same list of courses, or from appropriate courses offered by History (Ancient History), Art History (Greek, Roman and Byzantine Art), Philosophy, Theater, or the Classical Greek and Latin concentrations. *A maximum of 3 courses can come from outside the department.

6. TRANSITION POLICY

Since the program has not changed in any significant manner, we do not foresee transition problems that go beyond the adaption of the quarter credit hours to the semester requirements at the ratio of 5:3.

7. CURRICULUM MAPS: see Appendix

- A. Curriculum Map for the Classics Major, Classical Humanities Concentration
- B. Curriculum Map for the Classics Major, Ancient Greek Concentration
- C. Curriculum Map for the Classics Major, Latin Concentration
- D. Curriculum Map for the Classics Major, Greek and Latin Concentration

The concentration "Greek and Latin" makes use of the same courses as the Classical Greek and Latin c oncentrations; they have the same place on the curriculum map.
