Program Learning Goals

Note: these are required for all undergraduate degree programs and majors now, and will be required for all graduate and professional degree programs in 2012. Nonetheless, all programs are encouraged to complete these now.

Program Learning Goals

- Students develop critical thinking about philosophy.
- Students read, think, and write about the history of philosophy.
- Students read, think, and write about contemporary philosophical topics.
- Students learn formal methods in logic.

Assessment

Assessment plan includes student learning goals, how those goals are evaluated, and how the information collected is used to improve student learning. An assessment plan is required for undergraduate majors and degrees. Graduate and professional degree programs are encouraged to complete this now, but will not be required to do so until 2012.

Is this a degree program (undergraduate, graduate, or professional) or major proposal? Yes

Does the degree program or major have an assessment plan on file with the university Office of Academic Affairs? Yes

Summarize how the program's current quarter-based assessment practices will be modified, if necessary, to fit the semester calendar.

No modifications.

Program Specializations/Sub-Plans

If you do not specify a program specialization/sub-plan it will be assumed you are submitting this program for all program specializations/sub-plans.

Pre-Major

Does this Program have a Pre-Major? No

 CAMPUS

Dear Office of Academic Affairs,

The Department of Philosophy has completed its proposal for the semester versions of its programs: Bachelor of Arts Major, Minor, and Ph.D. In what follows, I describe the process that produced the attached program designs, the products of that process, and the plans the Department has developed for implementing the conversion.

Process

The Department charged its Undergraduate Committee with developing proposals for semester versions of its philosophy minor and major and its Graduate Committee with developing a proposal for a semester version of its Ph.D. program. The committees gathered information concerning the corresponding programs in a wide variety of peer and “aspirational peer” institutions. After reviewing the programs of other respected philosophy departments around the country, each committee brought forth to the entire Department concrete recommendations for semester versions of each of the three programs.

These proposals were discussed by the entire Department at departmental meetings on January 11, 2010, February 15, 2010, and April 5, 2010. (The Department meetings include two graduate students as voting members.) During the discussions at these meetings, multiple amendments were proposed and voted on and the resulting proposals were passed, in accordance with our Pattern of Administration, by an e-mail vote held from April 9 through April 16. The vote of the Department for each of the three programs was overwhelming: 16 in favor, one abstention, and no negative votes.

Programs

The Department has made minor revisions to each of its three degree programs continuously over the years. After our last program review in 2006, we considered and put into place a number of changes in our undergraduate major program and our Ph.D. program. As a result of the fact that we have continuously re-evaluated and adjusted our programs, the changes we concluded were necessary at this point were relatively minor. These are outlined below.

The Minor Program:

Quarters: We believe that, given the inherent interdisciplinary nature of philosophy, a philosophy minor can be an attractive complement to a very wide variety of major programs. As a result, we have designed the minor to be extremely flexible. This approach is maintained in the proposed semester minor program. Under the quarter system, students were required to take four philosophy courses (20 quarter hours) in philosophy at or above the 200 level. Of these courses, at least two (10 quarter hours) had to be at or above the 300 level and, of these, at least one (5 quarter hours) had to be at or above the 400 level.

Semesters: Under the semester plan, where our undergraduate courses will be 3 semester hours each, students wishing to minor in Philosophy will still need four courses (12 semester hours) at or above the (equivalent) 2000 level. Of these four courses, at least two (6 semester hours) must be at or above the 3000 level. And of these, at least one (3 semester hours) must be at the 5000 level. This constitutes a slight increase in the level of the required courses, but no increase in the adjusted credit hours for completion of a philosophy minor.

The Major Program (B.A. in Philosophy):

Quarters: The requirements for a B.A. degree in philosophy are considerably more specific with respect to content. We require, as a prerequisite to the major, completion of a course in symbolic logic (Philosophy 250). The major itself consists of 9 courses (45 quarter hours) at or above the 200 level. Three of those courses (15 quarter hours) are in the history of philosophy (Philosophy 301-305) with Ancient Philosophy (301) being required. Three of the courses (15 quarter hours) must be in a category called ‘philosophical topics’, with Moral Philosophy (431) being required. In addition, at least two courses (10 quarter hours) must be at the 600 level.

Semesters: The basic structure of the philosophy Bachelor of Arts degree under semesters remains the same, with one minor adjustment and one important addition. Symbolic Logic (Philosophy 2500) will be a prerequisite to the major. Students will still be required to take three courses (9 semester hours) in the history of philosophy, but Ancient Philosophy (Philosophy 3210) will not be required. Instead, students may take any three of the specified courses in the history of philosophy. The philosophical topics requirement will remain the same: students are required to take Moral Philosophy (3300) and any two courses from a large list of alternatives for a total of 9 semester hours in this category. We will retain a “level requirement,” mandating that students have at least two courses (six semester hours) at the 5000 level. Students will also be required to take one further course in Philosophy at the 3xxx, 4xxx, or 5xxx level. The major requirements, themselves, comprise 30 semester hours.

The important addition is a “Gateway Seminar.” This course (3 semester hours) is designed to provide philosophy majors with an intensive writing course early in their major career. Because it is a skills course, it will be taught in a small class format and the content will vary.

The Ph.D. Program:

Quarters: Under the quarter system, our Ph.D. program requires students to complete 120 quarter hours. We have two individual course requirements: Advanced Symbolic Logic (650) and a First-Year Seminar (700). In addition, we have both a distribution requirement and a requirement concerning the total number of courses/seminars a student must complete. Details of these requirements are in the attached documents.

Semesters: The Ph.D. program in Philosophy under semesters will reflect a minimal change in substance from our current Ph.D. program. The most significant change in the doctoral program requirements is a reduction in the total number of courses/seminars required from 16 to 14. This was done to reflect the fact that seminars are being redesigned to include more content under the 14-week semester term.

Implementation

The Department is committed to ensuring that the transition of our programs from the quarter system to the semester system takes place without impeding students' progress in the program. We believe that this goal is best achieved by working with students in the transitional years on an individual basis. The size of our program, and the fact that our programs do not rely on sequentially structured course requirements makes this approach not only feasible but the most appropriate.

The design of our degree programs under the semester system has been reviewed by the entire faculty with significant input from our graduate students. The attached proposals have the nearly-unanimous support of the Department and I join in supporting them.

Please contact me if you have any questions.

Sincerely,

5. Philosophy 367 & 597 do not count towards your major program, although they may be used for GEC purposes.

Note: The College of Arts and Sciences does not allow—except by petition—students to count toward GEC requirements a course used in their majors. (Exceptions, having to do with data analysis, pertain to some majors—but not with philosophy.)

Department of Philosophy Transition Policy

The Department of Philosophy is committed to protecting the academic progress of its students. Students should find that the shift from quarters to semesters does not disrupt their progress towards a degree in Philosophy if they actively develop and follow academic plans in consultation with their academic advisors and the Undergraduate Studies Committee chair. Students completing their degrees in Philosophy within this transition will receive approximately the same amount of instruction as students enrolled under either the quarter or the semester model, and the changes to our programs will not affect the quality of the education provided by Philosophy. To ensure the conversion will not harm our students' progress, we will continue to provide intentional and purposeful advising by understanding how the changes in our courses and program requirements will affect our students' degree programs. We will maintain flexibility with our students' progress through their degrees and assist them in planning their programs to graduation.

The Department of Philosophy has approximately 160 B.A. students each year in various stages of their degree programs. With a dedicated full time professional staff member who administrates undergraduate issues, the Department is well equipped to personally handle the needs of its students during the semester conversion process. We are committed to individually serving our students to ensure their success and achievement throughout the semester conversion process.

The Department of Philosophy also commits to updating all documents, forms, and materials that are available in person or electronically to reflect these changes and the semester requirements, including our website, handbooks, advising sheets, and program forms available in print and online.
