Program Learning Goals

Note: these are required for all undergraduate degree programs and majors now, and will be required for all graduate and professional degree programs in 2012. Nonetheless, all programs are encouraged to complete these now.

Program Learning Goals

- Students develop the ability to analyze interrelationships among cultural differences, including race, gender, class, and sexuality in the U.S.
- Students develop the ability to understand different ethnic communities and their histories in the U.S.

Assessment

Assessment plan includes student learning goals, how those goals are evaluated, and how the information collected is used to improve student learning. An assessment plan is required for undergraduate majors and degrees. Graduate and professional degree programs are encouraged to complete this now, but will not be required to do so until 2012.

Is this a degree program (undergraduate, graduate, or professional) or major proposal? No

The Department of Comparative Studies currently offers the following undergraduate and graduate programs:

- 1. Bachelor of Arts in Comparative Studies with six areas of concentration or subplans, each of which is a Transcriptable Specialization. All students in the major must choose one of the following specializations:
- Comparative Cultural Studies
- Comparative Ethnic and American Studies
- Comparative Literature
- Folklore
- Religious Studies
- Science and Technology Studies
- 2. Bachelor of Arts in World Literatures
- 3. Three undergraduate minors:
- American Studies
- Folklore
- Religious Studies
- 4. Master of Arts in Comparative Studies
- 5. Doctor of Philosophy in Comparative Studies
- 6. Graduate Minor in Comparative Cultural Studies

The academic focus of Comparative Studies is the study of culture and cultural differences; within that broad agenda, undergraduate students choose a particular "area of concentration" (subplan or "transcriptable specialization"). The six areas of concentration for Comparative Studies majors are Comparative Cultural Studies, Comparative Ethnic and American Studies, Comparative Literature, Folklore, Religious Studies, and Science Studies. Unlike many Arts and Sciences majors, the Comparative Studies major is interdisciplinary and interdepartmental, and students take approved elective courses in other departments to satisfy requirements; this will remain the case after semester conversion. Once an area of concentration is chosen, students, along with their advisers, put together the set of courses that best reflects each student's particular interests and also satisfies the requirements of that area. Comparative Studies maintains lists of courses in other departments that count for major credit in each area and provides majors with an interdepartmental course schedule each quarter. Students who are Comparative Studies majors take an active role in planning the program that best accommodates their academic goals.

The Department of Comparative Studies approached semester conversion by first of all establishing an ad hoc Committee on Semester Conversion. Its chair and the Department chair both attended the quarter-long semester conversion Curriculum Institute offered by UCAT in autumn of 2009. Subsequently, the Graduate Studies Committee, the Undergraduate Studies Committee, and the Department faculty as a whole engaged in a thorough-going examination of our degree programs and curriculum in light of semester conversion. The changes we ultimately agreed to, in a series of meetings in the Winter and Spring quarters of 2010, are minimal regarding both specific courses and whole programs. But we did use the occasion to update our graduate course listings, combining several courses as single repeatable seminars, modifying several others, and adding a small number of new courses. For example, we redesigned the 700-level "Race and Citizenship" as a repeatable 8000-level seminar, and we eliminated the 800-level "Religion and Politics" and "Religion and Sexuality" and replaced them with the 8000-level "Seminar in Religion," which will also be repeatable. And we have added new introductory courses in Trauma Studies and in Comparative Ethnic and American Studies. These updates have not changed the structure or content of the MA or PhD programs or the Graduate Minor.

Undergraduate program changes are also minimal. But the review process greatly enhanced our ability to identify solutions to problems that have arisen within the major. In particular, we have added the requirement that students must take both Comparative Studies 3990 (successor to CS 398), Approaches to Comparative Studies, and at least one Comparative Studies course at the 4000 or 5000 level before enrolling in Comparative Studies 4990 (successor to CS 598), Senior Seminar. We believe this will minimize the number of students who take 4990 before acquiring sufficient writing and analytical skills to excel in the seminar environment. The major will continue to require 12 courses (36 semester hours). We have also added several undergraduate major courses to the curriculum: several courses in religious studies (e.g., a second course on myth and ritual, a course on sacred architecture, another on religions and politics); several for comparative studies students in all areas (e.g., a course on social movements and another on community partnerships); and several new courses for science studies students (e.g., a revision of the introductory course to focus on technology and an additional introductory course in science studies and an honors version of the newly re-titled Cultures of Medicine). Each of these courses would have been proposed regardless of the conversion to semesters.

We have also added one course to the requirements for the World Literatures major, Comparative Studies 3990 (successor to CS 398), Approaches to Comparative Studies. We are convinced that this course will add an important dimension of social and cultural theory to the literary and translation theory required of students majoring in World Literatures. This will add one course to the number (currently 11) of courses required for the World Literatures major (for a new total of 12 courses, 36 semester hours).

Requirements for two of the three undergraduate minors administered by Comparative Studies are unchanged: with conversion, the American Studies and Religious Studies minors will each require 15 semester hours, or five three-credit courses (each currently requires 25 credits), and the distribution of required and elective courses will remain the same for both. The Folklore minor, which currently requires 24 credits (but in practice, five courses, and virtually always 25 credits), will be revised to require 15 credits, or five 3-credit courses, under the semester system. This minor currently requires a minimum of two courses that are specifically focused on folklore, but students are routinely advised to choose folklore-focused courses as electives (rather than, for example, more general courses on Latino history or Persian culture). The minor will continue to be fully interdisciplinary, drawing courses from eight departments in Arts and Humanities and the Social and Behavioral Sciences, but by requiring five folklore-focused courses (exceptions may still be approved by the adviser) students will be able to concentrate more fully on folklore studies.

The only other change we have made in our curriculum is to re-number our courses. Like those in many departments, our quarter course numbers accreted piecemeal over the years, and had become rather illogical. We have completely revamped our course numbering to take advantage of the four digits in the new semester numbering system, so that the first (thousands) digit refers to course level, the second refers to the position of the course within our curriculum (e.g., required, introductory, advanced, capstone), while the third digit refers to content area (religious studies, comparative literature, American studies, and so on), and the last distinguishes among courses that are at the same level, in the same position, and on the same subject matter.

So even though the resulting changes to courses and programs are minimal, the Department was able to use the semester conversion process to re-examine its curriculum, regularize its course-numbering system, and increase the rigor and coherence of its degree programs.

Rationale Statement for American Studies Minor

Under the quarter system the minor required 25 credit hours (five courses) selected from several departments for their general coverage of American problems and issues. Under the semester system, the minor will require 15 credits (five three-credit courses). Their distribution among traditional academic disciplines will remain the same, enabling students to acquire a broad view of the different perspectives that can be brought to bear upon the study of American society and culture. Comparative Studies 2281 American Icons will continue to be required. As in the quarter version, additional courses will be chosen from two categories, Social Problems and Issues and Cultural Expression, including at least one course from each, in consultation with the student's minor adviser. These courses should constitute a balanced, coherent program with a sharp sense of focus.

Quarter and Semester Advising Sheets for American Studies Minor

The Arts and Sciences advising sheet for the American Studies minor is inserted on the following page. We have included also an advising sheet that has been updated for semesters, although this form is generated through Arts and Sciences.

The Ohio State University College of Arts and Sciences

American Studies Minor (Comp Stds)

Department of Comparative Studies, 451 Hagerty Hall, 1775 College Rd., Columbus, OH 43210-1340; 614-292-2559; http://comparativestudies.osu.edu

American studies is an interdisciplinary field that investigates the study of American culture, including social, political, economic, historical, aesthetic, religious, and material elements. The American Studies minor brings together scholarship in a number of fields to give students a broad view of American society from a variety of perspectives, with particular attention to the problems of a diverse, pluralistic nation in an interdependent world.

The minor in American studies consists of 25 credit hours of course work predominantly in the social sciences and humanities. The courses should constitute a balanced, coherent program with a sharp sense of focus. Students are required to take Comparative Studies 234 and one course from each of the categories below. The remaining credit hours may be chosen from either or both lists. At least 15 credit hours must be at the 300 level or above. Up to 10 credit hours of minor course work may overlap with the GEC.

To develop a strong background in American Studies, the following courses are recommended, although minor credit cannot be given for them: English 270, History 151 and 152, Music 341, and Rural Sociology 105.

Once the coordinating advisor in the Department of Comparative Studies has approved the Minor Program Form, you should file the form with your college or school counselor. For further information about the minor program, contact the department.

Transition Policy for the American Studies Minor

Under the quarter system, the American Studies Minor requires 25 credits; under the semester system it will require 15 credits, five courses in either case. One course is required, Comparative Studies 2281, American Icons, the equivalent of CS 234. Electives are chosen from two categories of courses in several departments: "Social Problems and Issues" and "Cultural Expression." At least one course must be chosen from each category and may be chosen from any department. No changes have been made in the structure of the minor.

We have devised the following table to show students how the change to semesters will affect their completion of the minor:

Semester Conv	Semester Conversion Table for Comparative Studies Major (all concentrations)
Quarter Courses	Quarter Credit Hours	Semester Courses	Additional Semester
Completed*	Completed*	Needed*	Credit Hours
			Needed
0	0	5	15
1	5	4	12
2	10	3	9
3	15	2	6
4	20	1	3
5	25	0	0

^{*} if the number of quarter hours falls between these numbers (1-4, 6-9, 11-14, etc.) each credit will be counted as 2/3 of a semester credit. So, for example, if a student has completed 3 courses totaling 13 quarter hours, the student will be considered to have completed 9 semester hours toward the minor and will need 6 additional credits (two courses). Such differences are not likely to require additional coursework.

For undergraduate minors, conversion information will be posted on the website and students will be invited to contact the department advisor for further information.
