The cultural, historical, economic, environmental, and geopolitical importance of this region of Latin America, which covers a vast expanse of South America, spreads through 9 different countries, has several climates, and encompasses a population of more than 70 million people, cannot be overstated. On the one hand, the Andes are the birthplace of some of the most advanced indigenous civilizations in the Americas, and the present location of vibrant indigenous societies and cultures. Quechua is spoken by approximately 10 million people, while Aymara is spoken by approximately 3 million. In addition, there are vibrant indigenous political movements seeking both revolutionary change and peaceful change within established democratic institutions. On the other hand, the Amazon basin covers 3,179,000 square miles which include the largest rain forest in the world, inexhaustible natural resources, an incredible biodiversity, and a multiplicity of ethnic groups who speak hundreds of native languages mostly related to the Tupi family.

The interdisciplinary minor in Andean & Amazonian Studies will fulfill the needs of students majoring in Spanish, Portuguese, History, Anthropology, Geography, International Studies, Political Science, and many other disciplines, who are interested in the region, its languages and peoples, its history and societies, its cultures and environment.

The undergraduate minor in Andean and Amazonian Studies requires completion of 10 prerequisite credit hours (see below) as well as a minimum of 25 credit hours in required, core, and elective course categories. Specifically, students are required to take History 368.02 and Spanish 332. In addition, students must take 10 credit hours from the listing of core courses, which contain a minimum of 75% content on the Andean and Amazonian region and 5 credit hours from the list of elective courses which contain a minimum of 25% content in the Andean and Amazonian region.

Prerequisites: (minimum 10 credit hours)
