Subject: Re: FW: Interdisciplinary Undergraduate Minor in Popular Culture Studies

So many minors, so little time.

I don't know what happened to our response to the PC minor, but we did endorse it and approve the inclusion of our courses. However, we also suggested removing 201, which was twice taught with themes that are appropriate to the minor, but which is more often taught as a general introduction to relations of literature and society. If in the future this or another course is taught with a more narrow and relevant focus, this could be handled by your proposed advising structure. I'd also suggest adding CS 241, Introduction to Asian American Studies (or else cutting 242, the intro to Latino/a studies, as they are more or less symmetrical), and CS 264, Reading Popular Culture (cross-listed with English).

Let me know if you need me to print and send another copy of the concurrence form.

Dear David,

I am still trying to find the bottom of my desk after a very busy Spring Quarter, so your concurrence form may be buried somewhere but I don't have it in my Popular Culture Studies folder. I apologize if you have sent it and it has gone astray. If you have sent it, please let me know and I will start a search party. If you have not had time to look at this one, I would appreciate it if you can. (I know that your faculty committee usually reviews these as well.) Thanks!

Dear Dean Schoen:

We are pleased to grant concurrence for the proposed Interdisciplinary Minor in Popular Culture Studies. The proposal clearly describes an interdisciplinary program that will benefit and interest our majors and students across the University. Given the increasing importance of popular culture studies to our field, we believe this minor will nicely complement our own coursework and staffing, current and planned.

Subject: Concurrence form for Popular Culture

Thanks for the opportunity to review the Minor in Popular Culture Studies that is being developed. I think there might be some theatre courses both on the books and in development that could be added to the course options list. They are:

Theatre 367.01 Self Images: America on Stage 1830 to the Present

Theatre 367.03 Criticizing Television

(Currently slogging through curricular approval at the department/college level)

Theatre 596 Censorship and Performance (At OAA)

I don't want to stand in the way of the Minor making forward progress, but I would hope that the planners might consider these additions to the list of options. Certainly the last two speak to "Popular Cultural" issues without a doubt.

Thanks,

Mark

Hello Linda,

Earlier this week you asked about the concurrence from WS for the pop culture minor. I'm enclosing the response our Undergrad Committee sent directly to the Pop Culture committee chair:

Hi Jared!

The undergraduate studies committee discuss the proposed minor in popular culture studies at our meeting today.

We congratulate your committee on the excellent proposal. We're pleased to give concurrence, but make the following recommendations:

The Minor should also include

WS 517: Women Film Directors (includes both US non-mainstream and non-US)

WS 576 Women and Visual Culture in Latin America

Further, we believe that WS 517, WS 576, WS 215 and WS 375 (the latter, when taught by Tapia) fulfill the requirement for a popular culture outside majority-U.S. culture. In our own department, WS 576, 215, and 375 (when taught by Tapia) fulfill the difference and diversity requirement.

WS 215 Reading Women Writers is a variable topics course, but it always focuses either on US women of color or on international women writers.

I'll get the paperwork signed ASAP, and will have the syllabi for 517 and 576 emailed to you.

Finally--and this latter has less to do with women's studies than with my role in Latino/a Studies--I noticed that there are currently no courses from Spanish and Portuguese listed for the new minor. There are at least three courses, Spanish 330, H565, and H680, which are relevant to popular culture studies. I'll ask Professor Unzueta if he can send you the syllabi for those courses.

Best,

Catriona
