Course Goals:

“Big History” is the attempt to explain history at the very largest scales in the widest perspectives. This course presents two related challenges: First, we will work to understand the essential state of knowledge about cosmic, earth, evolutionary, and human history—what David Christian terms the “modern creation myth.” We will explore how researchers across a range of fields have posed and tested some of the key theories that help explain how the universe, planet, life, and humanity got to be the way they are. At the same time, we will work to understand and evaluate powerful conceptual tools and perspectives that try to explain history on vast scales. Students must be prepared to engage with these ideas seriously but critically. By the end of class, you should have a new appreciation of the contemporary state of natural and social sciences, and of the power and limits of different disciplinary methods.

General Education Historical Studies Goals

Learning goals: History courses develop students’ knowledge of how past events influence today’s society and help them understand how humans view themselves.

Expected Learning Outcomes

1. Students acquire a perspective on history and an understanding of the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students display knowledge about the origins and nature of contemporary issues and develop a foundation for future comparative understanding.
3. Students think, speak, and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Rationale for Meeting Historical Studies Goals

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Historical Study:

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes in Historical Study: History courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies
Students will explore how history operates at multiple scales from the whole of universal time down to events of the past century, as well as the connections among cosmic, earth, life, and human history.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past.
Students will examine contemporary environmental and climate change and human impacts on the planet in the wider context of earth and human history.
3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio-cultural context.
Students will encounter and critique major theories of change that encompass human behavior in all of its complexity.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper comparing distinct historical moments, social movements and their effects
Students will write an essay in multiple stages weighing the strengths and weaknesses of macrohistorical theories, including research to find criticisms and competing points of view.

Format:

The course will have two lectures and one discussion section each week. In most weeks, we will cover essential information based on a chapter of the textbook in the first class, and then explore a related issue in more detail during the second class. When possible, we will invite guest speakers with expertise in particular fields to discuss current topics and new discoveries.

<<NB: In practice, I will adopt the special topics according to the guest speakers available, or new discoveries and current issues in science. The topics below are only current suggestions, based on issues that have received recent attention in mainstream scientific literature, and which I could cover myself if necessary.>>

Course Policies:

Attendance: I will take note of attendance and participation in each class. Students are expected to complete the assigned readings each week and come prepared to discuss the material.

Grading: A (90-100), B (80-89), C (70-79), D (60-69), F (below 60). Plus and minus grades for scores within three points of the next letter grade (e.g., B- starts at 80, B starts at 83, B+ starts at 87).

Submitting Work: Please submit all work by email in a MS Word compatible format (.doc, .docx, .txt, or .rtf). Your assignment is not complete until it reaches my inbox in a readable format. Note that computer issues are not a valid excuse for late or incomplete work.

Late Work: Late work will receive 8 points off for every 24 hours late, weekends included, except in cases of documented family or medical emergencies. If you contact me at least four days before an assignment is due, I might in exceptional cases grant an extension. Assignments for other classes or other extracurricular activities are not a valid excuse for late work.

Assignments:

Attendance and Participation:

Students are expected to attend each lecture and to complete the reading for participation at each discussion section. Your attendance for all classes and participation at discussion sections will be worth 20% of your final average.

Quizzes:

The course will have frequent short-answer quizzes, on the lectures and reading. Students may use their own hand-written or typed notes for these quizzes, but not any material copied from other students or any other source. Quizzes missed will count as a 0. I will drop your lowest score and average the others for a combined 25% of your course grade.

Essay:

Each student will select one title from a list of books proposing some large overarching interpretation of history based on one of the big concepts—thermodynamics, game theory, evolutionary biology, etc.—that we will discuss in this class. You will read this work carefully and critically and evaluate whether the author's theory is sound or not. There will be four steps to this essay project, each with a different due date: a prospectus, a explanation of the author's case, a critique of the author's case (using two outside sources), and a final essay synthesizing the explanation and critique. Please read the detailed essay instructions <attached> carefully before you begin.

Final Exam:

There will be a final exam testing major facts and ideas from the entire course, worth 20% of your final average.

Final Average:

20% Attendance and participation

25% Quizzes

35% Essay (including intermediate steps)

20% Final Exam

Reading:

The course will have three types of reading. First, there is the required textbook: David Christian, Cynthia Stokes Brown, and Craig Benjamin, Big History: Between Nothing and Everything (New York: McGraw-Hill, 2013).

Second, students will select one book from a list for their essay assignment (see attached essay instructions).

Third, the professor or teaching assistant may assign additional short readings on discussion topics for each discussion section.

Schedule:

Week 1: Introducing “Big History”

1. What is Big History?

-Big History, introduction

2. Science as a “Modern Creation Myth”?

Week 2: The Universe

1. Origin of the Universe and Stars

-Big History, chapter 1

2. What is the Universe Made Of? Historical debates and current research

Week 3: The Solar System

1. The Sun and Planetary History

Big History, chapter 2

2. A “Goldilocks Planet”? Historical and modern debates on the uniqueness of Earth

Week 4: Life

1. Origins and Evolutionary Theory

Big History, chapter 3

2. Does Evolution have a Direction? Debates on teleology

Week 5: Humanity

1. Human Origins and Evolution

Big History, chapter 4

2. When Did We Become “Human”? Debates on hominid humanity

Week 6: Agriculture

1. Origins of Agriculture

Big History, chapter 5

2. Invasion or Coexistence? The archaeological and genetics of early farmers and hunter-gatherers

Week 7: Agrarian Civilizations (1)

1. Origins of Agrarian Civilizations

-Big History, chapter 6

2. Climate change and collapse? Holocene climate trends and historical influence

Week 8: Agrarian Civilizations (2)

1. Classical Empires in Eurasia

-Big History, chapter 7

2. What Drives Cooperation? Game theory approaches to macrohistory

Week 9: Agrarian Civilizations (3)

1. Religion, Culture, and Exchange across the Old World

-Big History, chapter 8

3. Do Ideas have a Life of Their Own? Theories and criticisms of cultural evolution

Week 10: Agrarian Civilizations (4)

1. Agrarian Civilizations in the Americas and the Pacific

-Big History, chapter 9

2. What Happened on Easter Island? Archaeology and the debate over an ecological parable

Week 11: Early Modern World

1. Global Connections 1000-1700

-Big History, chapter 10

2. A Connected World? The discoveries of network theory and its application to history

Week 12: Modernization

1. Origins of the Modern World 1700-1900

-Big History, chapter 10

2. Why did Violence Decline? Statistics and multidisciplinary perspectives

Week 13: The Anthropocene

1. Globalization 1900-2010

-Big History, chapter 12

2. When does the Anthropocene Begin? Debating a man-made geological epoch

Week 14: The Future

1. Scenarios of the Future

-Big History, chapter 13

2. Can We Guess the Future? A brief history of big predictions

Essay Instructions

In addition to your regular reading questions, you have one essay assignment to be completed in multiple parts over the course of the semester. The goal of this assignment is to explore in depth and evaluate one approach to understanding the human condition through one or more of the disciplines discussed in class.

Please choose from one of the following books:

Ball, Philip. Critical Mass: How One Thing Leads to Another. New York: Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 2004. (Big Idea: Apparently complex social behaviors often emerge from mere particle-like interactions of individuals.)

Diamond, Jared M. Guns, Germs, and Steel: The Fates of Human Societies. New York: W.W. Norton, 2005. (Big Idea: Geographical differences can explain the long-term ascendance of some nations over others.)

Gould, Stephen Jay. Full House: The Spread of Excellence from Plato to Darwin. New York: Harmony Books, 1996. (Big Idea: The faith in increasing complexity and progress is mostly a statistical illusion or a human delusion.)

Pinker, Steven. The Better Angels of Our Nature: Why Violence Has Declined. New York: Viking, 2011. (Big Idea: Evolutionary psychology can explain the persistence of violence in human history—and its recent decline. NB: This is a very long book, so students interested in this selection should consult with me about which chapters to read.)

Spier, Fred. Big History and the Future of Humanity. Malden, MA: Wiley-Blackwell, 2010. (Big Idea: There is a continuum of increasing complexity throughout cosmic, evolutionary, and human history, which can be understood in terms of the density of free energy flows.)

Waal, F. B. M. de. Our Inner Ape. New York: Riverhead Books, 2005. (Big Idea: Our primate heritage enlightens our understanding of human relations, politics, conflict, and cooperation.)

Wilson, Edward O. The Social Conquest of Earth. New York: Liveright, 2012. (Big Idea: Culture has allowed humans to live and evolve—almost—like eusocial insects.)

Wilson, Edward O. Consilience: The Unity of Knowledge. New York: Knopf, 1998. (Big Idea: We can and should now unite all the major branches of knowledge and bridge the sciences and humanities.)

Wright, Robert. Nonzero: The Logic of Human Destiny. New York: Vintage Books, 2000. (Big Idea: The history of human society is the rise of non-zero-sum collaboration.)

Step #1: Choose

-Select a book, and write a short explanation (about 200 words) of why you chose it, and what preliminary ideas you have about the author's theory. <due date>

Step #2: Explanation

-Read the book and write a formal summary of the author's argument of about 500 words. For now, focus on presenting the argument's strengths. <due date>

Step #3: Contextualize and Critique

-In an essay of about 500 words, briefly assess the context and limits of the author's approach and the weaknesses of his argument. Locate and cite at least two critical reviews of the book in question published in respectable journals, or direct challenges to the book in respectable published articles or monographs. <due date>

Step #4: Final Essay

-Write a formal essay of about 1600 words with a clear thesis statement, evaluating the strengths and weakness of the author's theory.

You will be graded holistically on the final essay and on all aspects of the writing process, for a total of 35% of your final class grade. Failure to complete any step of the essay will result in an automatic 10 points off your essay grade.

Please e-mail or see your TA or professor at office hours if you have any questions or concerns.

Concluding Notes:

Statement on Plagiarism and Misconduct: It is the responsibility of the Committee on Academic Misconduct to investigate or establish procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term "academic misconduct" includes all forms of student academic misconduct wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. Instructors shall report all instances of alleged academic misconduct to the committee (Faculty Rule 3335-5-487). MEMORANDUM

TO: Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee (ASCC)

FROM: Paula Baker, Chair, Undergraduate Teaching Committee, Department of History

RE: Assessment Plan for proposed GE courses: Historical Study Category, Social Diversity in the U.S., and Diversity: Global Studies

Assessment Goals and Objectives

1. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for all History courses might be summarized as follows:

Historical Study GE Requirements:

Goals:

Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Goals of the courses that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes:

History courses develop students' recognition of how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past.
3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio- cultural context.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct historical moments, social movements and their effects

2. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Social Diversity in the U.S. might be summarized as follows:

Social Diversity GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in social diversity will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture in the United States in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students describe and evaluate the roles of such categories as race, gender and sexuality, disability, class, ethnicity, and religion in the pluralistic institutions and cultures of the United States.
2. Students recognize the role of social diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values regarding appreciation, tolerance, and equality of others.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand how the categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation have shaped peoples' identities and the distribution of power and resources in the U.S. and elsewhere
 2. Describe theories of racial, ethnic, class, national, gender, and religious formation on exams and written assignments.
 3. Critically examine theories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation
 4. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation.
 5. Access and critically examine movements framed by race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and/or nation in a wider socio-cultural context.
 6. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments of ethnic, racial, nationalist, gender, class, and/or religious mobilization or social movements and their effects.
3. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Diversity: Global Studies might be summarized as follows:

Global Studies GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in Diversity – Global Studies will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture across the world in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students understand some of the political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical aspects of one or more of the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in the World.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples.
3. Access and critically examine ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wider socio-cultural and global context.
4. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today.
5. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand the complexity of debates over international issues. They will describe theories of international issues on exams and written assignments.
6. Students will understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world.

II. Methods

An assessment of whether these objectives are met is effectively carried out by an examination of the work students are actually required to do for the course. Contributions in class discussions will be considered, but weighted more lightly, given the tendency for more confident students to contribute more to such discussions. Paper and exams will provide an understanding of students' abilities to think historically and to engage in analysis. This can be gauged by their responses to specific exam questions—asking students to provide a perspective on history and relate that perspective to an understanding of the factors that shape human activity. Thus, exams for Historical Study courses will have at least one question that requires students to provide a perspective on the factors that shaped an event or theory. Similarly, for courses that include Diversity in the U.S. GE requirements, we will have at least one question that requires students to provide a description of the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity and religion and how those roles have helped shape either their perspective or the country's perspective on diversity. For courses that include Diversity: Global Studies, we will ask one question that requires students to provide an understanding of some combination of political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical differences in or among the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S. In this way, we hope to measure the courses (and the students') progress toward the multiple objectives of the GE. In this way we should be able to ascertain whether they are acquiring the desired skills and not simply learning (and regurgitating) specific information.

Summary of Data:

A committee, appointed by the UTC Chair, will be asked to evaluate a sample of questions and papers, and to gauge how well the goals of the course seem reflected in them. Assessment of Historical Study, Social Diversity, and Diversity: Global Issues from the GE goals will be carried out primarily through the evaluation of formal graded assignments and ungraded in-class assignments. The committee will rank the assignments across a four-category scale that captures students' mastery of the GE goals. Students will complete an informal feedback survey halfway through the semester to assess their own performance, the pace of the class, and the instructor's effectiveness. A brief summary report will be written by the UTC Chair, and that, as well as the sampled questions themselves, will be made available to the instructor and to the Chair of the department. We intend to insure that the proposed courses adequately articulate these goals, teach toward them, test for them, and help students realize their individual potential to meet them. Assessments will be summarized and used to alter the course for the next teaching.

Curricular Map that shows how, and at what level, the program's courses facilitate students' attainment of History learning goals.

Ashley,
Can you attach this to Sam's course?
Thanks,

Dear Paula,

I have reviewed your planned syllabus for the "Big History" course, and I concur that the course can go forward through the college process.

I do have a few concerns about how the course will run. One of the biggest issues I have in my own classes is that many students think that certain subjects (e.g., evolution or the Big Bang) are still matters for debate, when in fact the debate was settled long ago through accumulated evidence and strong, predictive theories. We now know, for example, that even though some people have a hard time accepting it, there is nothing about evolution that could possibly support any teleological point of view. Will the students be able to understand the differences between settled and open questions after taking this course?

Best wishes,

Don Terndrup

Hi Barbara,

We've looked the syllabus and it looks great. No obstacles or objections from Anthropology: we offer full concurrence.

Best of luck with the course.

Scott

Dear Professors McGraw and Larson,
History is interested in offering a new course, "Big History," and we need the concurrence of Anthropology to go forward. I'm not sure if either of you is the correct contact, but if you could either let me know who the correct contact is or -- better yet! -- process the request, I'd be most grateful.

We're hoping to offer the course next fall semester.
I've attached the syllabus.
Thanks,

Professor Baker,

The College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences has reviewed your request for concurrence for the proposed "Big History" course and is supportive of the proposal.

Best wishes in the development of this new course.

Dear Professor Neal,

The History department seeks your concurrence on a new course we'd like to offer. While it's obviously not a science course (it would carry Historical Studies GE credit), we need your College's or one of its department's concurrence (an email is fine) for the course to go forward through the College of Arts and Science's process.

We'd like to begin offering the course next fall.

I've attached a syllabus.

You might not be the right contact, but if you could let me know who is the more appropriate person I'd appreciate it.

Thanks,

“This looks like a really interesting course, and if I was a student of history, natural science, anthropology, etc. I would be very interested in taking it.

I think the proposal is well thought out and would complement a number of facets of the ecology and aquatic sciences courses I'm involved with, as well as my global change ecology seminar course.

While the proposal hits on most of the main topics I would want to see included in a course of this scope, one thing that could benefit it is inclusion (on the several thousand yrs BP time frame) of the role of sea level stability, or lack thereof, as a primary determinant of the development of human societies. For example, there is a growing body of literature on how, following the most recent Holocene deglaciation (~20k yrs ago - present), sea level stabilized only a few thousand years ago and this allowed societies to flourish in coastal regions, which had profound impacts on maritime trade, the stability and growth of population centers in coastal regions, etc. The theory is that until sea level stabilized after deglaciation, human societies could not develop to nearly the extent they did once sea level rise slowed and essentially stopped for the last couple thousand years. This also has major implications for how societies are predicted to be destabilized again once sea level starts rising in the Anthropocene.

The instructor may be planning on including something on this in the course, but might be worth mentioning just in case they hadn't thought about it.”

“I think this sounds like an interesting course. I suspect it will be quite challenging for a 2xxx level course, considering the scope of topics to be covered. Expecting students to grasp evolutionary theory in one lecture may be a stretch; and I expect the same may apply to the other topics. There will be some overlap with quite a few courses on campus, but not enough to be concerned with. One thing I wondered about is whether there are any pre-requisites? Will this be a history student's first (only?) exposure to the scientific method and process? That aside, I support the proposal.”

“This sounds like a very interesting multidisciplinary course. As Doug mentioned, my only concern is that students gain a correct understanding of evolutionary theory. Is it a good idea to include debates on teleology? I would want students to be clear about the distinction between historical/current beliefs and scientific facts. Other than that, I fully support the scope of this topic. I think it is beneficial for students to see how science/ the environment are directly linked with human societies. Another interesting topic that could be covered is environmental anthropology as it directly focuses on the relationship between people and their environment, both in the present and past.”

“I think it sounds like a great course – especially for a General Education history course. It's an ambitious list of topics but very relevant. I would second Dr. Bauer's comments about sea levels and economic development. As a former student of physical geography and the geography of development I think those are crucial concepts to understanding historical events.”
