History 2204 Honors The History of Modern Europe, 1500-the present

Description. In the 16th century, Europe was still peripheral to much of the world. By the beginning of the 20th century, however, Euro-American flags and interests dominated the globe. The world today is the product of this transformation. In this course we will study the creation of the modern world through the many European revolutions and counter-revolutions— intellectual, commercial, industrial, nationalist, imperialist, and feminist – which helped to bring it into being. In particular, we will examine internal European developments over the past four centuries in tandem with European expansion first in America, then in Asia, Oceania, and Africa.

Our goal is to think critically about the world in which we live and to write imaginatively about its past. Students will learn to describe, analyze and critically evaluate the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity, national origin and religion as they relate to international/global institutions, issues, cultures and citizenship. In the process, students will come to recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Our work begins with close reading of the assigned texts, which include a general textbook and several primary sources. Classes themselves will consist of lecture and discussion. Lectures are designed to supplement, not replace, the required reading. Exams will draw on class lectures, required reading, and discussion. Additional assignments will allow you to work on more narrowly focused topics.

HISTORY 2204H AND HISTORICAL STUDY AND GLOBAL STUDIES GE REQUIREMENTS

History majors: You can use History 2204H to fulfill the Global category; post-1750 and PCS (Power, Culture, and Society) and CCE (Colonialism and Comparative Empires) for constellations.

Historical Study (General Education Goals and Outcomes)

Goals:

Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Historical Study:

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes in Historical Study:

History courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies. Theories of history: The course adopts a comparative approach and focuses on four trends that have interacted to shape the history of Europe and its world role since 1492: global interconnectedness, which has tightened over time; the problems of identity and difference, which have been intensified by interconnectedness; the rise of the mass society, in quantitative and qualitative terms; and the conflict between technology and the environment. Historical methods: The course combines a topically inclusive global vision with the ability to focus in depth on selected empirical cases that illustrate the importance of mastering economic history, cultural history, social history, and environmental history.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past. Historical debates: The course will study debates over the causes of global expansion and the "rise" of the West, the wars world-wide that accompanied this expansion over four centuries, and the new forms of learning from the Scientific Revolution to the Enlightenment to the Industrial Revolutions that both emancipated and enabled new forms of servitude —interconnected phenomena that defined the modern world. Contemporary debates: The course concludes with a unit on critical problems of the present and foreseeable future, ranging from conflict control, escalating national, ethnic, and racial tensions in Europe and globally, and environmental degradation.
3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio-cultural context. The course presents students with a variety of sources, including novels and films as well analytical writing, and asks them to analyze how the sources of different types illustrate the themes of the course. The course has been designed to take a "whole history" approach, including politics, economics, society, and culture. The four themes and the contemporary emphasis take in most of the issues mentioned here.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper comparing distinct historical Moments, social movements and their effects. Both the required paper and the essay questions on the exams address these points explicitly.

Diversity – Global Studies (General Education Goals and Outcomes)Goals:

Students understand the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture in the United States and across the world in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students understand some of the political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical aspects of one or more of the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Global Studies:Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes in Global Studies:

History courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in the World. With its comparative approach and its four clear themes, and readings and films from countries all over the world, the course combines a topically inclusive global vision with the ability to focus in depth on selected empirical cases that illustrate global points. The four themes of the course cohere around the question of how the world's peoples can live together without generating unmanageable conflict or destroying their earthly habitat.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples. The four themes of the course, grounded in social science perspectives, provide criteria for comparison and selectivity, precisely for the purpose of comparing similarities and differences in different societies.
3. Access and critically examine ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wider socio-cultural and global context. All the materials in the course were selected to do this.
4. Carry out in-depth analysis comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today. In their papers and exam essays, the students compare and contextualize historically specific texts in terms of their local and their global significance.
5. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in-class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand the complexity of debates over international issues and the particular historical role of Europe in shaping the global present. The readings and films include works from, among others, France, Germany, Great Britain, Italy, North Africa and the Caribbean.
6. Students will understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world. Today's globalized world is the subject of the course.

Reading. The following books are required. All books are available from SBX bookstore, and a copy of each is on Reserve in Thompson Library. The Levack and Conrad are sold as a bundle at a discounted price. It is very important that you acquire this particular edition of the main textbook. It is expensive, but it is the best one on the market, and thus particularly appropriate for honors students.

Brian Levack et al, The West: Encounters and Transformations. Vol. II Since 1550

Françoise de Graffigny, Letters from a Peruvian Woman

Joseph Conrad, Heart of Darkness

Primo Levi, Survival at Auschwitz

Franz Fanon, Wretched of the Earth

Other readings can be found on line via Carmen, as indicated in the syllabus.

Requirements. You must attend all class meetings, come to class prepared, and hand in written work on time. If you have to be absent from class for any reason, please inform me in advance. I'm very happy to discuss any aspect of the course with you, and my office hours are listed above. I can also be reached by e-mail, and feel free to schedule an appointment outside of my office hours.

Class participation, including 6 short writing assignments, will count for 30% of the final grade. There will be an in-class mid-term exam at the end of week 5 (20%), 2 papers (30%), and a final exam (20%). All Assignments and grading policies are described in more detail below.

Assignments. The assignments are various and are designed to improve your ability to write and speak clearly and effectively. Historical analysis in general requires the ability to demonstrate an understanding of why something happened and to explain its significance, to make comparisons and connections between different peoples, regions, periods, and events, and to use analytical categories to show change over time. The following assignments are required to complete the course:

1) Class participation and short writing assignments (30%):

Discussion of the assigned readings form the core of this course. You are expected to come to class having already read the assigned chapter in our main textbook, Levack et al., The West: Encounters and Transformations and accompanying documents. Each chapter contains several short documents, maps and images and a section entitled "Justice in History" to which you should pay particular attention. Some documents for discussion are not in your textbook but are on Carmen, which need to be brought to class on the appropriate day. Everyone should participate in class discussions, and I will not hesitate to call upon students. Students will take turns recapping at the beginning of each class the major points of the lecture in the previous class. Active participation in class discussion is essential to getting a good grade in the course.

There will also be several short written and oral assignments (responses, quizzes, oral summaries, etc.) over the course of the term as part of your participation grade. These assignments may be on a lecture or textbook chapter, or on a particular reading due that day. You will turn in a 2-page summary of the six major primary sources assigned in the course on the days we discuss those readings: Descartes, de Graffigny, Marx, Conrad, Levi, and Fanon. In these summaries you should pick out and discuss key short passages (no more than one or two sentences) in the sources that seem most revealing to you of the author's point of view/arguments. Questions to think about while you are doing these readings will be passed out ahead of time.

2) Mid-term and Final:

20%: The mid-term will cover all the material from the first half of the course. It will consist of a map exercise, I.D.s, a short answer essay and a longer essay, both on the documents we read in the previous weeks. There will be some choice for all the questions on the mid-term.

20%: The final will be the same format as the mid-term and cover the second half of the course. For the longer essay on the final, you will be given a topic ahead of time comparing Primo Levi and Frantz Fanon; you will then write that essay during the exam.

3) Papers

30%: There are two short papers (5 pages) required for the course. You need to come up with an original argument, and illustrate it with quotations from the reading you are analyzing. Keep your citations short, and if they are more than three sentences, they should be indented and single spaced. If you are using an edition of the reading different from the ones ordered for the class, you must cite the edition you are using in a bibliography. All quotations must be cited in the body of your paper by giving the title and page number (p.) from the cited texts. I will read drafts of these papers if you turn them in at least three days before the assignment is due.

Paper topic no. 1: Françoise de Graffigny's Letters from a Peruvian Woman

The assignment is to write a five-page double-spaced essay on one of the two following questions. I am looking for a clear thesis and a well-developed argument, supported by direct quotations from the primary sources you have read. You should find your evidence in several different parts of the readings. You may draw upon the material presented in the introduction of Letters from a Peruvian Woman, but make sure you cite any ideas drawn from these introductions.

- A. Analyze de Graffigny's views on the position of women in her society and compare them the positions staked out by Olympe de Gouge in her Declaration of the Rights of Woman. Do both women qualify as feminists? Make sure you define what counts as feminism in the 18th century.
- B. De Graffigny's epistolary novel reveals a great deal about Enlightenment views of non-Western cultures. How does de Graffigny use Inca culture to criticize her own society? Is this novel condescending – even racist -- towards Peruvians, or on the contrary does it show respect, tolerance, and curiosity for indigenous peoples of the “new world”?

Paper Topic no. 2: Karl Marx's Communist Manifesto and Joseph Conrad's Heart of Darkness

The assignment is to write a five- page double-spaced essay on one of the following questions. I am looking for a clear thesis and a well-developed argument, supported by direct quotations from the primary sources you have read. You should find your evidence in several different parts of the readings. You may draw upon the material presented in the introductions of your editions of Marx and Conrad, but make sure you cite any ideas drawn from these introductions.

- A. Is the exploitation of Africans described by Conrad more similar to, or different from, that which oppressed workers in Europe under capitalism according to Marx? How do you account for these differences or similarities?
- B. Compare and contrast Conrad's and Marx's approaches to their respective subjects: capitalism and imperialism. Each is angry at what he perceives to be deep injustices in European society, but how do the two authors choose to analyze these problems and what solutions does each offer?

Extra Credit Students have the option of receiving extra credit for up to two of the following assignments (you must choose among a, b, and c; you can not write 2 film reviews). They must be completed by the dates set out below. (2 points each toward your participation grade)

- (a) Attend my office hours.
- (b) Evaluate one of the following films and write a 1-3 page response paper considering whether or not it is an appropriate representation of the historical event that is at its focus. Make sure you clearly set out what you mean by appropriate or inappropriate representation. Please also make sure that you give yourself enough time to obtain and view the film before the assignment is due.

Grading Policies.

Grades will be computed on the following standard scale:

A+ 97.5% and above B+ 87.5% and above C+ 77.5% and above D+ 67.5% and above

A signifies exceptional work, B superior, C satisfactory, and D passing but unsatisfactory. All grading is progressive, meaning that the goal is improvement over the semester, culminating in an outstanding final exam. Extensions will only be granted if they are requested 24 hours in advance. Late papers turned in without an extension will be marked down 2 points for every day after the due date.

Good writing relies on argument, evidence, and what William Strunk Jr. called the “elements of style.” An A paper is distinguished by an original, compelling argument; a judicious use of well-digested evidence; and an effortless command of grammar, spelling, and punctuation. A B paper is marked by an argument that is well-crafted, but predictable; evidence that is appropriately placed but inadequately exploited; and serviceable but not seductive prose. A C paper is characterized by a loose or regurgitated argument; mechanical citation and support; and awkward paragraph structure, repetitive constructions, lapses into colloquialism, and overuse of the passive, adverbs, and the exclamatory voice. A D paper is marred by assertions rather than argument; the misreading or misuse of evidence; and simple grammatical and spelling mistakes. An E paper lacks an argument; shows no familiarity with relevant evidence; and has consistent problems with basic sentence construction.

Late papers and Make-up exams: Students must take the mid-term and final exams at the scheduled times. Students will be allowed to take a make-up exam only for urgent reasons. The students should, if possible, contact me at least one day in advance, and present written proof of the reason for their absence (for example, an official statement from the Medical Center). Without an official excuse, students will be permitted to take a make-up exam at my discretion. Extensions for the paper are granted to those students presenting valid and verifiable excuses, preferably at least one day before the due date of the assignment. Papers that are received late without just cause or without a previously approved extension will be graded down by a full letter per day late.

If I suspect that a student has committed academic misconduct in this course, I am obligated by University Rules to report my suspicions to the Committee on Academic Misconduct. If COAM determines that you have violated the University's Code of Student Conduct (i.e., committed academic misconduct), the sanctions for the misconduct could include a failing grade in this course and suspension or dismissal from the University.

If you have any questions about the above policy or what constitutes academic misconduct in this course, please contact me. For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct (http://studentlife.osu.edu/pdfs/csc_12-31-07.pdf).

The History of Modern Europe, 1750-1950

This class serves as an introduction to the major questions in European history from 1750 to the present. The first half of the course examines the cultural and political challenges to absolutism that emerged in 18th century Europe and the subsequent period of upheaval associated with industrialization and the French revolution. The second half of the course focuses on the new nationalism and imperialism of the nineteenth century, the two World Wars, the Russian revolution, fascism and the Holocaust, and the history of Europe during the cold war and after the fall of the Soviet Union.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students exhibit an understanding of some combination of political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical differences in or among the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students are able to describe, analyze and critically evaluate the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity, national origin and religion as they relate to international/global institutions, issues, cultures and citizenship.
3. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for International Issues:

History courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in Europe.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples.
3. Access and critically examine ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wider socio-cultural and global context.
4. Carry out in-depth analysis comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today.
5. Describe theories of international issues in exams and written assignments. From debates over nationalism and socialism to the Cold War conflict, colonialism and decolonization, and post-World War II consumerism, the course addresses this criterion in multiple ways. The readings and films include works from and about western and eastern Europe and their colonial empires.
6. Students will understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world. Today's globalized world, and the place of Europe within this world, is the primary subject of the latter sections of this course, and is pursued throughout the earlier parts of the class.

The mid-term exam will cover all material from the class up to that point. The final exam is not inclusive and will only cover material since the midterm.

Participation (20 %)

The study of history is based upon the frank exchange of ideas and opinions, and cannot be reduced to the mere recitation of memorized facts. For this reason, I expect all students to attend lectures and participate actively in the discussions which take place during your section meeting. If you have a medical emergency that prevents you from participating in the class it is your responsibility to contact the professor in a timely fashion in order to make arrangements for a withdrawal from the course.

Academic misconduct:

It is the responsibility of the Committee on Academic Misconduct to investigate or establish procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term “academic misconduct” includes all forms of student academic misconduct wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. Instructors shall report all instances of alleged academic misconduct to the committee (Faculty Rule 3335-5-487). For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct (<http://sja.osu.edu/page.asp?id=1>).

Disability services:

Honors Course Proposal

The proposed course, 2204H, is an honors version of 2204. The non-honors version is entitled "History of Modern Europe, 1750-1950." The Honors version has the title "History of Modern Europe Since 1500."

- a) Limited enrollment to ensure the opportunity for student participation and for faculty/student interchange:
 - 2204H is limited to 25 students. (The regular version is capped at 90)
- b) Structure and instruction which is different from a lecture, a laboratory, and discussion meetings and materials for a non-honors course covering the same or similar subject matter:
 - There is considerable more primary source reading as well as writing in the honors version of this course. In addition, 2204H covers a larger sweep of time in more depth than the regular version.
 - 2204H meets twice a week, with half of each class reserved for discussion of assigned documents and half devoted to a lecture. Several classes have also been set aside exclusively for discussion of single longer readings. A classic work in its entirety is assigned for these days (e.g. Descartes, Marx, Conrad, Fanon etc.). A cap of 25 students means that all students can and must participate in every class discussion.
- c) Instruction by regular faculty members to ensure expertise with subject matter, experience with teaching and research, a role model of the professional in the discipline, and personal consultation.
 - 2204H is taught by a full-time faculty member whose expertise is in Modern Europe, whereas 2204 is taught by either faculty or advanced graduate students whose research is not always in this area.
- d) High expectations for student performance in writing, problem-solving, logical thought, analysis, synthesis, and oral presentation. Course requirements:
 - Two short papers, that require students to creatively compare a specific aspect of two assigned classic works and back up their argument with evidence from the texts
 - Two mid-terms that require the student to both analyze and synthesize the material presented in lectures, to explain why specific events in the past occurred the way they did.
 - One oral presentation recapping a previous class's lecture, including its principal arguments, for the other students.
- e) Content that transcends the textbook and introduces appropriate concepts, uses appropriate sources for intensive study of the topic, relates the discipline to other disciplines, and prepares the student for subsequent courses. Course content:
 - Literature, sociology, philosophy and history

- Special emphasis on the origins of globalization by emphasizing Europe's interactions with the rest of the World from 1492 on
 - Foundational course for understanding the modern world, the rise of the West, and the origins of the on-going conflicts of the 21st century
- f) Methodology that fosters the growth of intellectual attitudes and skills through individual exploration of the topic, introduction to research methods, and seminar participation.
- 25 students allows for the give-and-take of the seminar; participation is an important component of the course grade, rewarding students who come to class prepared
 - Students are encouraged to ask questions during lectures and discussions
 - Heavy emphasis on primary sources introduces students to historical evidence and teaches them how to read critically for research and writing.
- g) *Syllabus that clearly presents goals and objectives, assignments, expectations of performance, timetables and deadlines, and basis for grading. See attached syllabus
- h) *Grading that neither penalizes nor rewards the student because of his or her honors status. The grades in an honors course are not curved, because the class is not a normal population. See attached syllabus
- i) Work load and pace which both maintain the interest and challenge the ability of honors students.
- Written assignments are spread out evenly over the course
 - Reading varies from treatises to novels to memoirs to political tracts
 - There is a mid-term for each half of the course, rather than a final cumulative exam
 - Students are not expected to read beyond the assigned materials in the course. Emphasis is on mastering in depth the course material
 - Progress over the course will be rewarded in the final grade
- j) Communication of the enthusiasm and satisfaction which a scholar brings to his or her discipline
- Because of its size, the Honors version of this course allows for more active learning than the regular version and more direct interaction between the scholar and every student in the class
 - Under these circumstances, it is very easy to convey enthusiasm and satisfaction for the historian's craft.

MEMORANDUM

TO: Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee (ASCC)

FROM: Paula Baker, Chair, Undergraduate Teaching Committee, Department of History

RE: Assessment Plan for proposed GE courses: Historical Study Category, Social Diversity in the U.S., and Diversity: Global Studies

Assessment Goals and Objectives

1. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for all History courses might be summarized as follows:

Historical Study GE Requirements:

Goals:

Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Goals of the courses that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes:

History courses develop students' recognition of how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past.
3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio- cultural context.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct historical moments, social movements and their effects

2. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Social Diversity in the U.S. might be summarized as follows:

Social Diversity GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in social diversity will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture in the United States in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students describe and evaluate the roles of such categories as race, gender and sexuality, disability, class, ethnicity, and religion in the pluralistic institutions and cultures of the United States.
2. Students recognize the role of social diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values regarding appreciation, tolerance, and equality of others.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand how the categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation have shaped peoples' identities and the distribution of power and resources in the U.S. and elsewhere
 2. Describe theories of racial, ethnic, class, national, gender, and religious formation on exams and written assignments.
 3. Critically examine theories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation
 4. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation.
 5. Access and critically examine movements framed by race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and/or nation in a wider socio-cultural context.
 6. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments of ethnic, racial, nationalist, gender, class, and/or religious mobilization or social movements and their effects.
3. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Diversity: Global Studies might be summarized as follows:

Global Studies GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in Diversity – Global Studies will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture across the world in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students understand some of the political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical aspects of one or more of the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in the World.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples.
3. Access and critically examine ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wider socio-cultural and global context.
4. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today.
5. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand the complexity of debates over international issues. They will describe theories of international issues on exams and written assignments.
6. Students will understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world.

II. Methods

An assessment of whether these objectives are met is effectively carried out by an examination of the work students are actually required to do for the course. Contributions in class discussions will be considered, but weighted more lightly, given the tendency for more confident students to contribute more to such discussions. Paper and exams will provide an understanding of students' abilities to think historically and to engage in analysis. This can be gauged by their responses to specific exam questions—asking students to provide a perspective on history and relate that perspective to an understanding of the factors that shape human activity. Thus, exams for Historical Study courses will have at least one question that requires students to provide a perspective on the factors that shaped an event or theory. Similarly, for courses that include Diversity in the U.S. GE requirements, we will have at least one question that requires students to provide a description of the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity and religion and how those roles have helped shape either their perspective or the country's perspective on diversity. For courses that include Diversity: Global Studies, we will ask one question that requires students to provide an understanding of some combination of political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical differences in or among the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S. In this way, we hope to measure the courses (and the students') progress toward the multiple objectives of the GE. In this way we should be able to ascertain whether they are acquiring the desired skills and not simply learning (and regurgitating) specific information.

Summary of Data:

A committee, appointed by the UTC Chair, will be asked to evaluate a sample of questions and papers, and to gauge how well the goals of the course seem reflected in them. Assessment of Historical Study, Social Diversity, and Diversity: Global Issues from the GE goals will be carried out primarily through the evaluation of formal graded assignments and ungraded in-class assignments. The committee will rank the assignments across a four-category scale that captures students' mastery of the GE goals. Students will complete an informal feedback survey halfway through the semester to assess their own performance, the pace of the class, and the instructor's effectiveness. A brief summary report will be written by the UTC Chair, and that, as well as the sampled questions themselves, will be made available to the instructor and to the Chair of the department. We intend to insure that the proposed courses adequately articulate these goals, teach toward them, test for them, and help students realize their individual potential to meet them. Assessments will be summarized and used to alter the course for the next teaching.
