Course Title: Global Hotspots of the Early Modern World: Buenos Aires

GE: This course satisfies the GE requirements for Study Abroad, Historical Studies, and Global Studies.

A. Historical Study GE

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Historical Study:

This courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society and the human condition in the following ways:

1. Students will critically examine theories of history and explore a particular historical model—the notion of “global hotspots.” Students will engage with contemporary and historical debates about the development of the Americas and the nature of early modern empire. Readings and assignments will help them compare eighteenth century Buenos Aires with its latter development across time, and also to compare it with other imperial outposts--including North America—across space. Students will gain a sense of change over time and the variables that shape outcomes in the human past, and therefore acquire a greater understanding of present-day South America and of present day global centers.
2. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth discussion, students will critically examine political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in Buenos Aires in a broad socio-cultural context. We will look at the ways in which geography, commerce, resources, and demography propelled places such as Buenos Aires into international prominence. Students will explore the conditions that transformed Buenos Aires into an important global center, and how these factors shaped the independence movement and Argentina's post-independence trajectory.

3. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in three short papers, blog reports, and a final project on some aspect of Buenos Aires' history paper comparing distinct historical moments, economic issues, social movements, and their effects

B. International Issues GE

“Western (Non-United States)” [this particular offering to Buenos Aires belongs in this subcategory, but future offerings of the Global Hotspots Course may fulfill the Non-Western Global subcategory]

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students exhibit an understanding of some combination of political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical differences in or among the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students are able to describe, analyze and critically evaluate the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity, national origin and religion as they relate to international/global institutions, issues, cultures, and citizenship.
3. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for International Issues:

History courses develop students' knowledge of how past events influence today's society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Reading in primary and secondary sources, participating in class discussion, and engaging field exercises will help students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in Western civilization.
2. Students will engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples. They will read works on comparative empire and development, study immigration, race and gender history, and come to an understanding about a distinct region that offers both parallels to and differences from the pre- and post-independence experience of the United States.
3. Students will access and critically examine ethnically, nationally, or religiously framed movements—in this case, the emergence of an independence movement in South America--in a wider socio-cultural and global context.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today, by focusing on economy, politics, demography, or social and cultural issues.

5. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments will help students understand the complexity of debates over international issues. Students will visit archives, view primary sources, meet experts and hear lectures on South American history, explore past and present architecture, observe the lived environment, and encounter the social diversity and cultural product of one of the world's great cities. They will gain a new perspective across national boundaries. They will describe theories of international issues and development in essays and written assignments.
6. By studying global interaction, its causes, and its effects in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, students will better understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world.

C. Education Abroad GE

Expected Learning Outcomes

1. Students recognize and describe similarities, differences, and interconnections between their host country/countries and the U.S.
 2. Students function effectively within their host country/countries.
- Students articulate how their time abroad has enriched their academic experience.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for International Issues

Students will study early modern Buenos Aires not only through readings and lecture but also by direct observation and encounters with primary sources. They will study the past and physically explore the present, connecting history with its outcomes. They will use public transportation in the second-largest city in South America, and engage in both group and individual excursions to sites in both the city and its rural hinterlands. They will explore neighborhoods and encounter their residents, and visit key centers of artistic, cultural, intellectual, political, and economic life. They will document the effect of these encounters in essays and a final analytical project.

Course Description:

This class introduces the concept of early modern “hotspots” through the study of an American city that achieved that status in the eighteenth century: Buenos Aires. Just as New York, Shanghai, London, and Mumbai serve as major centers of global economic and cultural influence today, the early modern world had its own “global hotspots.” Hotspot cities served as centers of economic exchange, imperial expansion, and cultural interaction that shaped the emerging modern world we live in. These “hotspots” attracted diverse populations and connected empires with broad colonial regions. They served as hubs of international trading networks. They also influenced one another, since influential individuals often moved from one “hotspot” to the next, sharing models and expertise.

Poised at the intersection of Atlantic and Pacific trade routes, Buenos Aires served as a key entrepôt for Spain's American empire in 18th century. Goods from Europe poured into South America through Buenos Aires, and silver from mines in Peru flowed out to customers in Asia and well as back to Spain. Because of this centrality, Buenos Aires attracted an extremely diverse immigrant stream and reflected more European, African and Asian cultural diversity than perhaps any other city in the eighteenth century Spanish empire. Merchants developed internal and external trade routes and engaged in manufacturing and other export industries, creating a complex economy. The region's wealth attracted competing empires, and Buenos Aires was the target of several failed British invasions. Politically, distance from Spain fostered smuggling and other independent actions from local communities, setting the stage for failed imperial reforms and eventually for independence.

Learning Objectives and Outcomes:

This class aims to inform students about the emergence of cities that connected Old and New Worlds and that served as places of innovation in commerce, political structures, and ideas. Students in the class will obviously benefit from international travel experience and exposure, but they will also acquire new depth of knowledge about the history of global interconnectedness. They will consider the geographic, demographic, environmental and political conditions that helped propel certain cities into the status of hotspots, as well as why some early modern hotspots—Mumbai, London, and, Shanghai—retain their global importance today, while others do not.

In exploring Buenos Aires, one of the most important cities in the Americas since the 1700s, students will learn about the nature of European empires, the institutions and networks that kept them functioning, and also the transnational forces and interests that eventually undermined them and set the stage for independence movement in the Americas. Students will gain knowledge about the origins of global trade, the competition among rising nation-states, the unequal relations between centers and peripheries, and the pathway to economic development that colonial regions followed—all useful for understanding the present day world and development economics. Students will come to understand the ways in which diverse migrations shaped cities, how European influences met with indigenous and Asian influences to create new hybrid cultures and modes of urban living. Through the course's comparative focus, they will gain perspective on why other European imperial outposts—like the United States—followed similar or distinct trajectories. In addition, by examining a range of primary and secondary works, students will hone their analytical and critical abilities, and gain experience in research and presentation of findings.

Required Readings: Books are available at SBX, and on reserve at Thompson Library. Articles are available via JSTOR using the OSU library portal, an on-campus computer, or by signing into your OSU account off-campus. I will also make primary source documents available on Carmen for class discussion and for use in your final projects.

Peggy Liss, Atlantic Empires

Jeremy Adelman, Republic of Capital: Buenos Aires and the Legal Transformation of the Atlantic World (Ch. 1-3, 5)

Susan M. Socolow, "Buenos Aires: Atlantic Port and Hinterland in the 18th Century," in Knight and Liss, Atlantic Port Cities.

Daniel Schávelzon, The Historical Archaeology of Buenos Aires: A City at the End of the World (translated by Alex Lomonaco)

Course Requirements: Students will write three short essays and a project proposal, and complete a capstone project on some aspect of Buenos Aires' history. The capstone project will include written and digital components. The digital component could consist of an illustrated blog, a Prezi, a short film, or some other format that includes a visual element. Final projects will be posted to a shared box site for all students to view and evaluate.

Evaluation: Grades will be computed as follows: 34% for participation, comments and contributions to site visits; 36% for the three essays; 30% for the project proposal and final project.

Enrollment: Please note that all students must follow OIA rules and ensure that they are officially enrolled for the course. Enrolling officially and on time is solely the responsibility of each student.

Academic Misconduct:

It is the responsibility of the Committee on Academic Misconduct to investigate or establish procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term "academic misconduct" includes all forms of student academic misconduct wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. Instructors shall report all instances of alleged academic misconduct to the committee (Faculty Rule 3335-5-487). For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct (http://studentlife.osu.edu/pdfs/csc_12-31-07.pdf).

Students With Disabilities: Students with disabilities that have been certified by the Office for Disability Services will be appropriately accommodated, and should inform Prof. Newell as soon as possible of their needs. The Office for Disability Services is located in 150 Pomerene Hall, 1760 Neil Avenue; 292-3307, TDD 292-0901; <http://www.ods.ohio-state.edu/>.

Schedule of Assignments:

This course will consist of a combination of lecture, discussion, and site visits involving hands-on experiences for students with original documents, artifacts, architecture, and other elements designed to convey the realities of life in an eighteenth century colonial center.

RE: Assessment Plan for proposed GE courses: Historical Study Category, Social Diversity in the U.S., and Diversity: Global Studies

Assessment Goals and Objectives

1. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for all History courses might be summarized as follows:

Historical Study GE Requirements:

Goals:

Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Goals of the courses that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes:

History courses develop students' recognition of how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past.
3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio- cultural context.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct historical moments, social movements and their effects

2. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Social Diversity in the U.S. might be summarized as follows:

Social Diversity GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in social diversity will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture in the United States in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students describe and evaluate the roles of such categories as race, gender and sexuality, disability, class, ethnicity, and religion in the pluralistic institutions and cultures of the United States.
2. Students recognize the role of social diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values regarding appreciation, tolerance, and equality of others.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand how the categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation have shaped peoples' identities and the distribution of power and resources in the U.S. and elsewhere
 2. Describe theories of racial, ethnic, class, national, gender, and religious formation on exams and written assignments.
 3. Critically examine theories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation
 4. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation.
 5. Access and critically examine movements framed by race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and/or nation in a wider socio-cultural context.
 6. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments of ethnic, racial, nationalist, gender, class, and/or religious mobilization or social movements and their effects.
3. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Diversity: Global Studies might be summarized as follows:

Global Studies GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in Diversity – Global Studies will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture across the world in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students understand some of the political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical aspects of one or more of the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in the World.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples.
3. Access and critically examine ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wider socio-cultural and global context.
4. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today.
5. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand the complexity of debates over international issues. They will describe theories of international issues on exams and written assignments.
6. Students will understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world.

II. Methods

An assessment of whether these objectives are met is effectively carried out by an examination of the work students are actually required to do for the course. Contributions in class discussions will be considered, but weighted more lightly, given the tendency for more confident students to contribute more to such discussions. Paper and exams will provide an understanding of students' abilities to think historically and to engage in analysis. This can be gauged by their responses to specific exam questions—asking students to provide a perspective on history and relate that perspective to an understanding of the factors that shape human activity. Thus, exams for Historical Study courses will have at least one question that requires students to provide a perspective on the factors that shaped an event or theory. Similarly, for courses that include Diversity in the U.S. GE requirements, we will have at least one question that requires students to provide a description of the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity and religion and how those roles have helped shape either their perspective or the country's perspective on diversity. For courses that include Diversity: Global Studies, we will ask one question that requires students to provide an understanding of some combination of political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical differences in or among the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S. In this way, we hope to measure the courses (and the students') progress toward the multiple objectives of the GE. In this way we should be able to ascertain whether they are acquiring the desired skills and not simply learning (and regurgitating) specific information.

Summary of Data:

A committee, appointed by the UTC Chair, will be asked to evaluate a sample of questions and papers, and to gauge how well the goals of the course seem reflected in them. Assessment of Historical Study, Social Diversity, and Diversity: Global Issues from the GE goals will be carried out primarily through the evaluation of formal graded assignments and ungraded in-class assignments. The committee will rank the assignments across a four-category scale that captures students' mastery of the GE goals. Students will complete an informal feedback survey halfway through the semester to assess their own performance, the pace of the class, and the instructor's effectiveness. A brief summary report will be written by the UTC Chair, and that, as well as the sampled questions themselves, will be made available to the instructor and to the Chair of the department. We intend to insure that the proposed courses adequately articulate these goals, teach toward them, test for them, and help students realize their individual potential to meet them. Assessments will be summarized and used to alter the course for the next teaching.

Curricular Map that shows how, and at what level, the program's courses facilitate students' attainment of History learning goals.
