Course Change Information

What change is being proposed? (If more than one, what changes are being proposed?)

We want to change the course title and are requesting GE status in the Social Science (Organizations and Politics) category.

What is the rationale for the proposed change(s)?

The old course title uses antiquated terms. This course meets the rationale and learning outcomes for the GE category or categories we are requesting, as outlined in the Curriculum and Assessment handbook.

What are the programmatic implications of the proposed change(s)?

(e.g. program requirements to be added or removed, changes to be made in available resources, effect on other programs that use the course)?

N/A

Is approval of the request contingent upon the approval of other course or curricular program request? No

Is this a request to withdraw the course? No

Dear Curriculum Panel Members,

I am pleased to submit this curricular bundle for your review. This bundle includes a number of new courses, courses for General Education consideration, and several course changes. These submissions reflect the evolving profile of our teaching mission and what we have to offer our students and the institution generally. The Department of Anthropology has taken on one of its biggest curriculum revisions, involving both undergraduate majors (Anthropological Sciences, Anthropology) and graduate program, in its recent history. I am excited to endorse all of these submissions, and look forward to implementing the revisions to the Anthropology curriculum.

Best regards,

ANTHROP 3419: Latin American Migration
Jeffrey H. Cohen
TBA
Office Hours: TBA

This is a comprehensive investigation of Latin American and Caribbean migration. Our goals include 1) a review of the history of Latin American migration; 2) the investigation of contemporary movement; 3) the discussion of the costs and benefits of “transnational” movement; and 4) the outcomes of movement for Latino migrants settled in the US. From this course you will learn how anthropologists study migration and the cultural and social meaning of transnational movement.

GE LEARNING OUTCOMES WILL BE ADDED IF APPROVED

Readings:

Jeffrey H. Cohen, The Culture of Migration in Southern Mexico

Patricia Pessar, A Visa for a Dream: Dominicans in the United States.

Additional Readings are available on Carmen and noted on the syllabus

Classroom mechanics: Please remember that instructors do not give grades, grades are earned. Your grade will reflect your complete fulfillment of the required work in this class. Attendance is mandatory and I expect you to participate in discussions. We are going to cover a lot of ground and your attention to detail, presence in class and commitment to the content is critical. Your failure to attend this class will result in a reduced final grade. Understand that even with a clear and valid excuse, it can be hard to make up for lost time. If you will be attending a conference, if you are gravely ill it is your duty to let me know in a timely fashion and together we will try to find a solution. Failure to complete assignments in a timely fashion will result in lost points.

Assignments: This class includes 5 short assignments (described below), a midterm and a final.

Short assignments:

1. IOM (International Organization for Migration). Go to the IOM web site and click on the activities button. You should find yourself here: <http://www.iom.int/jahia/Jahia/activities/americas/lang/en>
 - a. Select a region, and then a country in Latin America or the Caribbean.
 - b. Using the facts and figures box, as well as the “overview” tell me about the country and note the net migration rate as well as when it was determined.
 - c. Use our discussion of migration models in the social sciences and suggest how at least one model can be applied to your example and respond to the following queries.
 - i. How does the model address individual and group migration outcomes?
 - ii. How does the model address social organization?

- iii. Assess the value of the model as a policymaking tool.
- 2. Return to the IOM (<http://www.iom.int/jahia/Jahia/activities/americas/lang/en>) site and go to the region section.
 - a. Summarize one of the projects that the IOM notes. You access projects by clicking on the “overview” section of their web page.
 - b. Review your project and answer the following questions:
 - i. Is the program applicable to other regions, cultures?
 - ii. What are some of the trade-offs (advantages, costs) reflected in the program’s implementation?
 - iii. What are some of the physical, social and economic costs or benefits of the program?
- 3. World Bank review: Go to the World Bank (<http://data.worldbank.org/country>) and find information about a country in Latin America.
 - a. Reference your report and describe the factors you believe may influence migration outcomes.
- 4. Pew Center: Go to Pew Hispanic Research Center (<http://www.pewhispanic.org/>). Select a report that you find interesting on an aspect of Hispanic immigration to the US.
 - a. Summarize the report’s recommendation and/or findings.
 - b. Answer the following:
 - i. How does the report address individual and group values and how they are applied to problem solving and policymaking?
 - ii. How are group values framed as policy by the Pew Center and the Hispanic community in the US?
 - iii. Access the sustainability of the Pew’s report. What is the value of the findings for the future of the Hispanic community in the US?
- 1. Migration Policy Institute: go to MPI (<http://www.migrationpolicy.org/>) once there, go to the Migration Information Source, at (<http://www.migrationinformation.org/index.cfm>).
 - a. Find an article on a country in Latin America or the Caribbean that you are interested in learning about that is not part of our Carmen reading list and is not by your instructor) and summarize it in about two pages.
 - b. Your summary should begin with a complete reference to the article you have selected and should follow this template:
 - i. Author (last name, first name), Year of Publication. Title. Web address.
 - c. In your summary note
 - i. the theme of the article
 - ii. the country in question.
 - iii. Review the findings and recommendations of the author(s).
 - iv. What is your critical opinion, do you believe the author is correct?
 - v. What are your disagreements if any?
 - vi. What would you add if you were writing a follow-up to your piece?

Exams:

There is one midterm and a final, each will include multiple choice questions, short answers and definitions-identifications.

I have organized this class with time for discussion. You should have the readings completed before class time. Your failure to prepare, to miss class and to participate can have a detrimental effect on your final grade.

Assignments 1-5	20 points
Midterm	40 points
Final exam	40 points
Total	100 points

Final grades are based on a standardized distribution, using the number of points for the course. A general guide to grades:
 A- 90-91; B+ 88-89; B 82-87; B- 80-81; C+ 78-79; C 72-77; C- 70-68-69; D 60-67; F < 60.

Academic honesty is fundamental to the activities and principles of a university. All members of the academic community must be confident that each person's work has been responsibly and honorably acquired, developed, and presented. Any effort to gain an advantage not given to all students is dishonest whether or not the effort is successful. The academic community regards academic dishonesty as an extremely serious matter, with serious consequences that range from probation to expulsion. When in doubt about plagiarism, paraphrasing, quoting, or collaboration, consult with the course instructor.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) is a federal anti-discrimination statute that provides comprehensive civil rights protection for persons with disabilities. Among other things, this legislation requires that all students with disabilities be guaranteed a learning environment that provides for reasonable accommodation of their disabilities. If you believe you have a disability requiring an accommodation, contact me to arrange an appointment as soon as the quarter begins. At the appointment we can discuss the course format, anticipate your needs and explore potential adaptations to meet your needs. I rely on the Office for Disability Services for assistance in verifying the need for accommodations and developing accommodation strategies. You are responsible for seeking available assistance from ODS at 292-3307, prior to or at the beginning of the quarter.

In case of a dispute concerning a grade, the student must first meet with the instructor to reconcile the matter. This should be done within a week after the grade has been received. At that time, the student should be able to submit materials used in creating the paper, drafts, and other supporting material. If reconciliation proves impossible, the matter goes to the Office of Student Advocacy.

Rationale for Latin American Migration (ANTHROP 3419) as a Social Science GE course.

Why does this course qualify for GE status in Social Science?

ANTH3419 is a comprehensive introduction to migration in Latin America. The course takes an anthropological and ethnographic approach to migration and explores the challenges that confront Latin American migrants as they travel within and across the region as well as to locations around the world. Migration examples come from throughout the region and explore how migration is modeled, the economics of mobility; culture and identity for migrants and non-migrants; as well as development, health, and gender. The structure of the course challenges students develop critical understanding and use their skills as social scientists as they explore and debate topics through in-class discussions, assignments and exams. Students from across the university likely have a some familiarity with migration and Latin America (perhaps through popular representations of Mexican immigrants living in the US), this class uses that background as a foundation to examine core themes in the anthropological study of migration in the region.

The class is organized around examples of migration from throughout Latin America to explore central issues including:

- Migration and anthropology
- Migration in Mexico
- Indigenous migration
- Gender and migration
- Central American migration
- Refugees
- Violence and security
- Caribbean migration

The topics covered allow students to develop a critical framework to understand migration in Latin America and what are the unique qualities that anthropology brings to the analysis of mobility. Through the class students will meet the goals of the Social Science GE course as they systematically study human behavior in Latin America migration; understand the structure of migration as it fits into Latin American society and culture; as well as the economic challenge migration poses for migrants from the region.

The class is focused on a specific topic and around specific readings. Students are expected to come to class prepared to discuss assigned reading materials.

Specific Learning outcomes:

ANTH3419 introduces students to the anthropology of Latin America migration and focuses on eight areas of critical concern to researchers. Weekly themes are organized themes and tied to the three Social Science GE Learning Outcomes.

Each week includes a discussion of the perspective that anthropology brings to the study of Latin American migration and then uses ethnographic examples to explore specific issues, opportunities and challenges. In this way, students are introduced to anthropological research as well as general issues in Latin American studies.

Meeting Social Science GE Learning Outcomes

Organizations and Polities: In weeks 1 and 2 students will discover and understand the theories and methods of social scientific inquiry (outcome 1.1); understand individual and organizational behaviors in a cross-cultural contexts (outcome 1.2); and learn to assess the importance of cultural and political values in social problem solving and policy making (outcome 1.3) as we discuss how to study and model migration for both the individual (migrant) and group (community) using anthropology. In weeks 4 through 7 the class is focused on Internal and international migration in Mexico as well as the unique qualities of indigenous migration. Throughout students will apply the theories and methods of anthropological inquiry and ethnography to the study of migration as part of a complex socio-cultural system (outcome 2.1); to understand the formation of political, economic, and social organizing principles around migration (outcome 2.2); and assess the nature and values of local community based organizations as they confront the opportunities and challenges posed by migration (outcome 2.3). Over second half of the course (weeks 9-16) we explore how the process of migration engages with opportunities and challenges around human and economic resources. Our discussion of gender and Central American migration (weeks 9 and 10) emphasize the theories and methods of social scientific inquiry as they apply to the study of the use and distribution of human, natural, and economic resources and decisions and policies concerning such resources (outcome 3.1). In weeks 11 and 12, our discussion of refugees, violence and security defines the political, economic, and social trade-offs that are reflected in decisions making and policymaking around migration (outcome 3.2). Finally, in weeks 14 and 15 we look to the future and assess the physical, social, economic, and political opportunities and challenges that surround the analysis of migration in Latin America with respect to resource use (outcome 3.3).

Readings and lectures use ethnographic examples and anthropologists to facilitate learning and for students to better understand the importance of migration in Latin America. Our discussions are an opportunity for students to develop their skills as independent, critical thinkers and access the important challenges that face Latin American communities. Debates around the opportunities and challenges that come with migration are a setting where students begin to build upon the anthropology they learn in the classroom to confront and assess “real world” outcomes.

ANTH 3416 GE ASSESSMENT:

Assessment of GE learning outcomes is fully integrated with assessment of objectives and expected learning outcomes of the course itself. The instructor assesses students in ANTH3416 through short written assignments as well as questions on the course's three exams. There are four short responses papers that ask students to address specific questions around the central themes of the course. These two page papers that are uploaded to CARMEN allow the instructor to evaluate learning and comprehension throughout the semester. The assessments ask students to apply what they learn from readings, lectures and course discussions to thematically based questions that focus on diversity in Latin America and how local communities and cultural groups shape attitudes and values. Questions for the exam included at least one that is specifically focused on GE related themes.

On the first exam, a question asks students to describe use ethnographic examples from class that that defines the role of family in different Latin American settings.

On the second exam, a question asks students to use ethnographic examples from class to define cultural identity in Latin American Society.

The third exam includes a question that asks students to define the meaning of sustainability in Latin American Society and how the term relates to specific ethnographic issues in different settings.

The instructor will use the responses of students to these questions as well as the thematic papers they write to evaluate whether they have gained mastery. Depending on the outcomes, the instructor will revisit the themes and use in-class discussion to further develop student skills. The instructor can also meet with students during office hours and use the time to review, train students in a one-on-one setting and build toward mastery.

Success (mastery) is indicated by the ability of the student to effectively define and describe the central themes of the class including what is unique to the anthropology of Latin America.

The instructor will use the student responses to revise learning outcomes to better meet GE goals. These outcomes will be archived by the instructor.
