- Students acquire an understanding of the theoretical and philosophical debates surrounding the interrelated concepts of peace, justice, and security.
- Students acquire the knowledge and skills to effectively evaluate and develop methods for building peace, and fostering justice and security across a wide range of contexts.

Assessment

Assessment plan includes student learning goals, how those goals are evaluated, and how the information collected is used to improve student learning. An assessment plan is required for undergraduate majors and degrees. Graduate and professional degree programs are encouraged to complete this now, but will not be required to do so until 2012.

Is this a degree program (undergraduate, graduate, or professional) or major proposal? No

Program Specializations/Sub-Plans

- Answers to queries:
 - 1) the IR&D minor is a specialization within the overall International Studies minor;
 - 2) Comm 3300 addresses the topic of conflict management, which is at the heart of Peace Studies;

Dear Council on Academic Affairs Members,

I am pleased to submit for your consideration a proposal for an undergraduate minor program in Peace Studies. A distinctive strength of this program lies in the systematic study of this values-driven and multidisciplinary applied science. The collaboration of faculty across disciplines in developing and overseeing this program ensures its quality.

The program's interdisciplinarity and flexibility will appeal to many students across the university as an important complement to their major programs. Given the strong and growing communities of faculty researchers in peace studies, I support the undergraduate minor in Peace Studies and I encourage its approval.

If you have questions, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Sincerely,

Janet M. Box-Steffensmeier

PROPOSAL TO INTRODUCE A PEACE STUDIES MINOR IN THE UNDERGRADUATE INTERNATIONAL STUDIES PROGRAM

To: The Council on Academic Affairs

From: Anthony Mughan, Director, International Studies

Background

In 2003, the Undergraduate International Studies Program (IS) proposed, and succeeded in, discontinuing Peace Studies as a separate specialization, or track, and incorporating it into the International Relations track to form the new International Relations & Diplomacy (IR&D) specialization, which is one of ten making up the International Studies curriculum. The basic reason was that there were not enough courses available across the university to sustain Peace Studies as a stand-alone major. Importantly, though, the introductory course to the Peace Studies track, IS201 (now IS2800): Introduction to Peace Studies, was incorporated into the reformed IR&D specialization as a required course for both the major and the minor. In the intervening years, this has proved to be a very popular GE course, offering honors as well as regular sections. In 2012-2013, for example, a total of 226 students took the course and 218 took it in 2013-2014. Moreover, a number of the students who have taken it regularly express their interest in continuing the study of peace beyond the introductory level and independently of an IR&D specialization in which a specific focus on the theory and practice of the study of peace does not loom large. This proposal is designed to fill this gap by adding a minor in Peace Studies to the International Studies curriculum. There are several reasons why this proposal is being made now. One, all the signs are still that there is student demand for such a minor. Two, the Mershon Center, in cooperation with the Department of Political Science, has just appointed Chris Gelpi to the Chair in Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution and he will anchor the peace program. The Mershon Center has also appointed a Peace and Conflict Resolution Studies Coordinator, John Carlarne, who will teach in the program. Three, there are now enough suitable courses available both within International Studies and in the many departments contributing to its curriculum to warrant a minor. Finally, a stable of stand-alone minors has been created in Arts and Sciences in recent years and this proposed minor will enhance this set of offerings.

This proposal envisages the creation of a Peace Studies minor within IS whose focus will be the theory and practice of peace studies on both a national and global scale. This minor will be independent of the existing IS track structure, but will NOT be open to IR&D majors or minors.

Rationale

The field of peace studies has three core characteristics. First, it is values driven. Much like medical science, peace studies has the promotion and maintenance of human wellbeing as its primary goal. Recently this concern for human wellbeing has developed to incorporate a systemic approach that emphasizes the complex and symbiotic relationship between humanity and the planet upon which it depends. Second, and much like the medical field, peace studies is multidisciplinary in that the fundamental questions it addresses are not solely the purview of those who identify themselves with the field of peace studies. Indeed, such questions as the possibility of universal coexistence and security, and the origins and nature of violence and injustice have occupied the humanities, sciences and social sciences long before the first peace studies programs were established after the Second World War. Third, peace studies is necessarily an applied discipline since, like medicine, its values can only be realized through the application of practical measures by well trained, knowledgeable and committed practitioners. The minor proposed here is intended to graduate students with the necessary knowledge, skills and informed commitment to contribute effectively to the construction of a more secure, just and peaceful world. Thus we have structured the minor require that students take a combination of theory and applied coursework.

The proposed minor in Peace Studies will promote these core strengths in order to produce graduates with the knowledge, skills and ethical foundation to be effective researchers, practitioners and advocates for peace and social justice. Moreover, The Ohio State University is unusually well-placed to produce graduates with this range of qualities. While there are one or two notable exceptions (for example, the University of California at Berkeley), peace studies programs have traditionally been the preserve of smaller colleges and universities with some kind of social mission or religious affiliation. Their very size and limited academic coverage has meant that the range, diversity and quality of courses available to students, especially in the area of applied peace studies, have been limited. Ohio State is in a position to circumvent this problem by virtue of the rich, perhaps unprecedented intellectual and physical resources on which its students can draw as they explore fundamental problems in the theory and practice of peace studies.

Curriculum

The proposal is for a 12-hour multidisciplinary minor in Peace Studies that is separate from the IR&D specialization in the IS curriculum and not open to students majoring or minoring in this specialization. All students minoring in Peace Studies will take the same introductory course, which must be passed with a grade of C- or higher.

This minor will be open to all IS majors except those in the International Relations & Diplomacy specialization, as well as to members of the undergraduate student body as a whole. No course in it will be allowed to count towards the IS major. In the event that a course were to be required on both this minor and the major, it will count towards the minor and students will be required to substitute for it on their major. All the courses counting towards this minor are approved and already on the books. They are also generally taught by faculty in the departments offering them. Students must maintain a C average in the minor, and no grade lower than C- will count towards the minor.

Administration

The minor will be listed in the OSU Bulletin as “an interdisciplinary minor offered by the Undergraduate International Studies Program.” Individual departments will not be listed so as to allow for the addition and subtraction of courses as circumstances in the contributing units change and/or as new units list courses in the minor. To declare a minor, students will meet with a UISP advisor, with whom they will plan their minor program. Proposed changes to the course content of the minor will be discussed by the Steering Committee that created it (Drs. John Carlarne, Chris Gelpi and Anthony Mughan) and referred to the UISP Oversight Committee for approval.

Departments wishing to propose courses for the Peace Studies minor should submit the following to the UISP Director:

- A fully articulated syllabus for the course(s);
- A statement (two pages maximum) describing how the proposed course(s) would add to the Peace Studies minor;
- A description of the history of the proposed course. Is it new? How many times has it been offered before and how often will it be offered in the future?
- A short biography of the faculty member who will have primary responsibility for teaching the course

All the courses that figure, now or in the future, in the proposed minor will have to share the characteristics of being offered regularly, preferably once a year but no less than once every two years.

Competition

To the best we can establish from websites, the only competition for this program in the state of Ohio is the concentration in Peace and Conflict Studies at Oberlin College, the minor in Peace and Conflict Studies at Bluffton University and the BA in War and Peace Studies at Ohio University. None of these programs, though, offers the systematic applied focus that is built into this proposed minor.

Notable in surrounding states are the following competitor programs:

Earlham College (Richmond, IN) BA in Peace and Global Studies

Michigan State University Specialization in Peace and Justice Studies

University of Notre Dame BA and a minor in Peace Studies

A comprehensive list of national and overseas colleges/universities with Peace Studies programs can be found at <http://pilgrimpathways.wordpress.com/2011/05/03/colleges-and-universities-with-peace-studies-programs/>.

Expected Student Enrollment

Year 1: 15 students

Year 2: 30 students

Year 3: 50 students

Implementation of Proposed Minor

Letters of concurrence from the heads of contributing departments are attached to this proposal (see Appendix A). It is hoped that the proposal will be approved by both ASC Curriculum Committee and CAA by the end of the 2015 Spring semester so that implementation will be possible in Autumn 2015.

Questions regarding this proposal should be addressed to Anthony Mughan, 33 Townshend Hall, 1885 Neil Avenue, CAMPUS; his telephone number is 292-9657 and his e-mail address is mughan.1@osu.edu.

Concurrences for Proposed Peace Studies Minor

Letter of Request

Dear Trevor,

With the appointment of Chris Gelpi as Mershon Professor of Peace Studies and Conflict Resolution, International Studies has been encouraged to reactivate the Peace Studies minor that it offered until 2003. Accordingly, Chris, John Carlarne, who is Peace Studies Coordinator at the Mershon Center, and I have redesigned the Peace Studies minor and plan to submit a proposal to the appropriate curriculum committees soon. The first step, however, is to get the concurrence from departments and other units for the inclusion of certain of their courses as electives in the redesigned minor. Below are the John Glenn School courses included in it. I can also, of course, send you the larger proposal if you wish.

PUBAFRS 2150: Introduction to Nonprofit Organizations
PUBAFRS 3140: Nonprofit Governance and Management

Does the John Glenn School of Public Affairs agree to allow the inclusion of these courses in the proposed Peace Studies minor? I look forward to hearing from you.

Tony

Replies: John Glenn School

Hi Tony,

Good to hear from you. We'd be happy to have these courses included in the minor.

Do me a favor and send a copy along – it may be a good fit for our students with international interests.

Best,

Trevor

Dear Tony,

Yes, political science concurs with the inclusion of these courses in the IS Peace Studies minor.

Hi tony –

We are fine with it and are happy to grant concurrences. I just want you to know that we don't offer the 4853.02 course regularly. It's just an "every now and then" offering.

Sociology

Dear Tony,

Thanks for including these sociology courses for the minor. I agree that they are a great fit with the minor. We look forward to working with you!

Dear Zenchao,

I wrote a couple of weeks ago asking for your permission to include SOC 3463 in IS's proposed Peace Studies minor. Since then, the proposal has been revised and it now includes three Sociology courses. They are:

SOC 3463: Social Stratification: Race, Class and Gender
SOC 4606: Social Movements and Collective Behavior
SOC 4666: Power and Society

Do I have your agreement that these courses can be included in the Peace Studies minor.

Hi Tony,

Yes, we will allow concurrence of AGRCOMM 5150 for the Peace Studies minor. The course is currently taught by Dr. Robert Agunga. He is also acting as the interim director of the Center for African Studies. The course content and context will be diverse. Thank you.
