Course Description

'International theory' is concerned with theoretical reflection on the explanatory, ethical, and legal aspects of international politics. In this course we will focus initially on the explanatory aspect, but with growing emphasis on ethics and law as the semester progresses. Part I deals with the traditional problem of international life, of maintaining peace in an anarchic system among states relatively equal in power. Part II calls the assumption of anarchy into question by looking at hierarchical structures in the international system between the North and South. Part III addresses the rise of the individual as a subject of world politics, and especially the ethical challenges of global governance that this creates. Throughout, an effort will be made to illustrate the relevance of theoretical debates for the real world, but in the end this is a course about ideas not information, and students will be evaluated accordingly.

Requirements

There are no books for this class, only articles and chapters available on Carmen. Students are responsible for all readings on the syllabus.

There will be three in-class closed-book exams, two midterms and a final, each worth 1/3 of your final grade. Review sheets will be distributed one week before each exam.

Class attendance is strongly recommended. Participation in class is encouraged but not required; however, at the end of the course students who are on the boundary between two grades (e.g. B+/A-) and have contributed regularly to discussion will be bumped upward.

Required Statement on Academic Misconduct

I expect all of your work in this course to be your own. Any cases of cheating or plagiarism will be reported to the university's Committee on Academic Misconduct, which investigates or establishes procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term "academic misconduct" includes all forms of wrongdoing wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct (http://studentaffairs.osu.edu/info\_for\_students/csc.asp).

Disability Services

If you need an accommodation based on a disability, contact me to arrange an appointment as soon as possible. I rely on the Office for Disability Services for assistance in developing accommodation strategies. It is located in 150 Pomerene Hall, 1760 Neil Avenue; telephone 292-3307, TDD 292-0901; (<http://www.ods.ohio-state.edu>).

Curriculum Map: How and at what level do program courses facilitate student attainment of program learning goals?

Program Learning Goals:

Political science is the study of public power: its mobilization, exercise, and transformation by governments, political parties, interest groups, and mass behavior. Political scientists examine the causes and effects of political power and institutions in decision-making and governance at various levels, from the local to the global. We employ both scientific and humanistic perspectives and a variety of methodological approaches to analyze political structures and processes in all regions of the world.

Majors in political science are expected to:

1. Acquire basic knowledge across the four major fields of political science—American Politics, Comparative Politics, International Relations, and Political Theory.

Students accomplish this goal by taking introductory and “pre-major” classes at the 1000 through 3000 level.

2. Gain deeper knowledge of the scholarly literature in one of the four major fields.

Students accomplish this goal primarily in courses at the 4000 and 5000 level, although 2000- and 3000-level courses may also contribute to this knowledge base.

3. Become familiar with debates about theories, research methods, and substantive issues, and learn to engage and assess contributions to the literature.

Students accomplish this goal primarily in courses at the 4000 and 5000 level, although 3000-level courses may also contribute to this knowledge base.

4. Develop analytic and critical thinking skills that will enable them to rigorously evaluate competing arguments and to appraise value-based claims.

Students accomplish this goal primarily in courses at the 4000 and 5000 level, although 1000-, 2000- and 3000-level courses may also contribute to this knowledge base.

Political science majors will acquire a knowledge foundation and an array of skills enabling them to pursue a wide variety of professional and leadership roles and to become responsible and well-informed citizens. We prepare our students for post-graduate studies in numerous areas including public policy, international affairs, law, business, and political science. Our department’s challenging and supportive learning environment gives students the confidence to assume progressively greater initiative and independence through their undergraduate years and beyond.

The charts below provide graphic information showing the relationship of our primary undergraduate major requirements [the field distribution and focus area] and courses, both in general and individually, to our Program Learning Goals. First, our pre major courses are categorized according to a level index and the goals that they fulfill. Second, the “field distribution” is categorized by the goals it fulfills. Third, the “focus area” is categorized by the goals it fulfills. Third, courses are categorized generally by level and by goals fulfilled in each level. Finally, a list of all undergraduate courses, including number, abbreviated title, field [for cross reference to the field and focus requirements], and programs goals is attached.
