I. Course Description

This one-credit course offers an introduction to the major in Comparative Studies. It is designed to help students to take full advantage of the curricular, research, and advising opportunities offered in and outside the department; to manage the particular challenges of independent and interdisciplinary work at a large university; to link classroom work to social and political engagement with relevant communities; and to prepare for life after graduation.

2099 is required of all majors declaring after 1 January 2016, and should be taken in one of the two semesters following the decision to declare; it may also be taken by majors who declare before 2016. Five class meetings are devoted to informal presentations by members of the Comparative Studies faculty. Other sessions focus on the history of the department and major, an orientation to the curriculum, advising and mentoring, research and the senior essay, study abroad and service learning, and life after comparative studies. Guests include current Comparative Studies majors and recent graduates.

Required texts:

A packet of all required reading materials is available on Carmen.

Assignments:

On eight occasions, students are required to come to class with a set of three typewritten questions that thoughtfully engage the assigned readings, topics for discussion, and intellectual projects of our invited guests. Each set of questions is worth up to 5 (five) points, for a total of 40 points. Students are also expected to be actively involved in discussions, and can earn up to 25 points for participation.

Attendance Policy:

Attendance is required and each unexcused absence will result in a loss of 5 (five) points. Attendance is worth up to 35 points.

Grading:

The course is graded S/U. To earn a grade of satisfactory, students must achieve a total score of at least 75 (out of a possible 100) points. Points are awarded for attendance (35), for oral participation (25), and for preparing written questions for discussion (40).

Final exam:

No final exam is scheduled.
