Re: Approval of Revision to the Forensic Science Minor Program

Dear Meg:

The SBS Panel on October 19, 2015 approved a proposal by Anthropology to revise its undergraduate Forensic Science minor program.

The proposal adds two courses, Introduction to Human Anatomy (Anthropology 3504) and Bioarchaeology (Anthropology 5610), to the program. Each could then be taken as an elective or as a core course to meet the program requirements. The program otherwise would remain the same. To complete the requirements, students continue to take at least 15 credit hours of core and elective courses, with two or more courses coming from the core component.

The courses provide foundational knowledge in the forensic discipline, and they have received significant interest among students. The additions would expand the choices for students and afford them greater flexibility. The panel agreed that the revision is appropriate, and voted unanimously to approve the proposal.

The panel recommended minor changes to the advising sheet. Those changes have since been made.

Sincerely,
