Dear Meg,

The Arts and Humanities Panel of the Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee met on March 29, 2016 and reviewed the revisions to the Disability Studies Minor. Since taking over as director of Disability Studies, Prof. Shuman had not made any changes, nor had her predecessor, so most of the changes are simple house-keeping involving typos and inaccuracies in credit and course numbers. Other changes include: changing the wording regarding the number of credits that can overlap with a major, complying with the university rule that at least six credits (not nine) must be at the 3000-level or above, the removal of two required courses from the electives list, the removal of two withdrawn courses (Teaching and Learning 6551 and Educational Studies: Special Education 5678), and the addition of English 4410 as an elective course. Finally, all graduate courses were removed from the minor with the exception of Health Services Management and Policy 7640, Law 7500, and Law 7509. They have a few ambitious students who are prepared to take these law and policy courses, all of which require approval of the instructor and the graduate school.

The panel unanimously approved the revisions with the request to point out to undergraduate students that they must petition the graduate school in order to take graduate courses.

Sincerely,
