History 2070: Introduction to Native American History

This course offers an introduction to the history of Native Americans from European contact to the emergence of Native resistance movements in the 1960s. The course will highlight the diversity of tribal histories in the United States, often subsumed under the notion of one “Indian” history, while still encouraging the students to see continuities and dynamic connections between the histories of various tribes as they engage with the European arrivals. Students will be encouraged to think about intersections of race, ethnicity, gender, class, and citizenship and how these categories have affected the relationships between tribal peoples and the American government.

Historical Study

Goals: Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today’s society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Historical Study:

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes in Historical Study: History courses develop students’ knowledge of how past events influence today’s society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies
Students will evaluate differing historical interpretations of the interactions between Native Americans and Euro-American governments and cultures.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past.
Students will look at the ways that historical negotiations over tribal sovereignty, assimilation, and regional Native cultures have changed over time and shaped current Native American political and cultural issues.

3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio- cultural context.

Students will analyze primary sources from various periods of Native American history and contextualize the sources using secondary analyses. They will be asked to interrogate the ways in which definitions of “Indian” and “citizen” changed over time, driven by changes in European colonialism and the American Revolution. One example of this will be the examination of complex, and evolving, Cherokee and American legal perspectives on tribal identity immediately before the Trail of Tears.

4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper comparing distinct historical moments, social movements and their effects.

The students will be asked to write two 5-7 page papers in which they will be asked to use a combination of primary and secondary sources to analyze the ways that historical movements and events have been represented; paper topics will include the interaction between native peoples and European explorers, traders, and settlers in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, U.S. “civilization” policies in the nineteenth century that led to the founding of non-reservation Indian boarding schools, and the emergence of new pan-Indian resistance movements in the twentieth century.

Diversity

Goals: Students understand the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture in the United States and across the world in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

Social Diversity in the United States

1. Students describe and evaluate the roles of such categories as race, gender and sexuality, disability, class, ethnicity, and religion in the pluralistic institutions and cultures of the United States.
2. Students recognize the role of social diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values regarding appreciation, tolerance, and equality of others.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Social Diversity in the United States:

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by:

1. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand how the categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation have shaped peoples' identities and the distribution of power and resources in the U.S. and elsewhere

This class will ask students to look at Native American history with an intersectional perspective and ask how categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, sexuality, religion, and nation shape and are shaped by Native tribal identities and the changing relationship between tribal nations and the United States.

2. Describe theories of racial, ethnic, class, national, gender, and religious formation on exams and written assignments.

Students will be asked throughout the class to think of the formation of racial, ethnic, class, national, gender, and religious identity as a shifting and historically specific process. For example, we will look at the ways that the consolidation of certain tribal identifications, such as those of the Bannock and Shoshone, did not in fact predate the American Revolution, but may in fact have occurred in reaction to the U.S. government; at the same time, we will look at how these shifts in western native societies also impacted indigenous perspectives on gender and spirituality.

3. Critically examine theories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation

The course will return throughout the term to different theories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation. Many of the readings, while historical in nature, ask the students to engage with alternative theoretical perspectives. The work of Richard White, for example, is grounded in a complex, poststructuralist understanding of power and how it affects notions of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation, while Ramon Gutiérrez work on the Pueblo employs theories of sexuality and gender that are grounded in queer theory and critical race theory.

4. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation.

Course materials will require that the students grapple with both historical and contemporary debates on race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation. In the material on the colonial era, for example, students will be asked to evaluate how differences in Native and Early Modern European perspectives on ethnicity, gender, class, and religion impacted colonial policies and Native responses.

5. Access and critically examine movements framed by race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and/or nation in a wider socio-cultural context.

Throughout the semester, students will learn about and critically evaluate both Native and Euro/American movements framed by race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation and place them in the larger historical context of Native American history. For example, students will learn about and evaluate, through analysis of primary and secondary materials, Native American resistance movements organized around notions of race, gender, nation, and religion in both the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

6. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper comparing distinct moments of ethnic, racial, nationalist, gender, class, and/or religious mobilization or social movements and their effects.

The students will be asked to write two 5-7 page papers in which they will be asked to use a combination of primary and secondary sources to analyze the ways that categories of race, gender, class, sexuality, ethnicity, religion, and nation have intersectionally operated to impact Native and European concepts of identity and political change.

Student Responsibilities:

Attendance and Preparation

Attendance is a critical requirement. Students who cannot avoid missing a class must notify me ahead of time and provide a 1-2 page write-up of the readings for that day as a make-up assignment. The write-up will be due one week from the original absence. Missing more than three classes will affect the participation section of the final course grade. Students will also be responsible for reading the assigned texts, and bringing assigned materials to each week's class.

Discussion Questions

All students must sign up for three class meetings during the semester where they will be responsible for posting a discussion question on the readings by noon the day before class. All students will be responsible for reading their peers' questions before class.

Assignments

Students will be required to write two five-page analytical papers. The papers should engage several (at least three) of the course readings in their analysis. The papers must be detailed and use Chicago style documentation. All papers are due at the beginning of class and will be penalized a half letter grade for each class meeting they are late. There will also be an in-class midterm exam on March 10th and a final exam during finals week.

Grading Policies:

Student Participation 10%
 Papers 20% each
 Mid-term 25%
 Final 25%

MEMORANDUM

TO: Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee (ASCC)

FROM: Paula Baker, Chair, Undergraduate Teaching Committee, Department of History

RE: Assessment Plan for proposed GE courses: Historical Study Category, Social Diversity in the U.S., and Diversity: Global Studies

Assessment Goals and Objectives

1. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for all History courses might be summarized as follows:

Historical Study GE Requirements:

Goals:

Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Goals of the courses that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes:

History courses develop students' recognition of how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history, and historical methodologies
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past.
3. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students will access and critically examine social, political, economic, military, gender, religious, ecological, and ethnic/racial/national movements in a wider socio- cultural context.
4. Students will carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct historical moments, social movements and their effects

2. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Social Diversity in the U.S. might be summarized as follows:

Social Diversity GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in social diversity will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture in the United States in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students describe and evaluate the roles of such categories as race, gender and sexuality, disability, class, ethnicity, and religion in the pluralistic institutions and cultures of the United States.
2. Students recognize the role of social diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values regarding appreciation, tolerance, and equality of others.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand how the categories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation have shaped peoples' identities and the distribution of power and resources in the U.S. and elsewhere
 2. Describe theories of racial, ethnic, class, national, gender, and religious formation on exams and written assignments.
 3. Critically examine theories of race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation
 4. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and nation.
 5. Access and critically examine movements framed by race, gender, class, ethnicity, religion, and/or nation in a wider socio-cultural context.
 6. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments of ethnic, racial, nationalist, gender, class, and/or religious mobilization or social movements and their effects.
3. Both the GE and course-specific learning objectives for History courses requesting Diversity: Global Studies might be summarized as follows:

Global Studies GE Requirements:

Goals:

Courses in Diversity – Global Studies will foster students' understanding of the pluralistic nature of institutions, society, and culture across the world in order to become educated, productive, and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students understand some of the political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical aspects of one or more of the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S.
2. Students recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values as global citizens.

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: Students will achieve the social diversity goals and learning outcomes by

1. Through reading in primary and secondary sources and in-depth class discussion, students critically examine the political, economic, social, cultural and philosophical development in the World.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on the differences and similarities between cultures and peoples.
3. Access and critically examine ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wider socio-cultural and global context.
4. Carry out in-depth analysis in a final paper, exam, or project comparing distinct moments in human history and how they shaped the world in the past and today.
5. Completing readings, attending lectures, and participating in class discussions and in-class assignments that will help students understand the complexity of debates over international issues. They will describe theories of international issues on exams and written assignments.
6. Students will understand the roots and structures of today's globalized world.

II. Methods

An assessment of whether these objectives are met is effectively carried out by an examination of the work students are actually required to do for the course. Contributions in class discussions will be considered, but weighted more lightly, given the tendency for more confident students to contribute more to such discussions. Paper and exams will provide an understanding of students' abilities to think historically and to engage in analysis. This can be gauged by their responses to specific exam questions—asking students to provide a perspective on history and relate that perspective to an understanding of the factors that shape human activity. Thus, exams for Historical Study courses will have at least one question that requires students to provide a perspective on the factors that shaped an event or theory. Similarly, for courses that include Diversity in the U.S. GE requirements, we will have at least one question that requires students to provide a description of the roles of categories such as race, gender, class, ethnicity and religion and how those roles have helped shape either their perspective or the country's perspective on diversity. For courses that include Diversity: Global Studies, we will ask one question that requires students to provide an understanding of some combination of political, economic, cultural, physical, social, and philosophical differences in or among the world's nations, peoples and cultures outside the U.S. In this way, we hope to measure the courses (and the students') progress toward the multiple objectives of the GE. In this way we should be able to ascertain whether they are acquiring the desired skills and not simply learning (and regurgitating) specific information.

Summary of Data:

A committee, appointed by the UTC Chair, will be asked to evaluate a sample of questions and papers, and to gauge how well the goals of the course seem reflected in them. Assessment of Historical Study, Social Diversity, and Diversity: Global Issues from the GE goals will be carried out primarily through the evaluation of formal graded assignments and ungraded in-class assignments. The committee will rank the assignments across a four-category scale that captures students' mastery of the GE goals. Students will complete an informal feedback survey halfway through the semester to assess their own performance, the pace of the class, and the instructor's effectiveness. A brief summary report will be written by the UTC Chair, and that, as well as the sampled questions themselves, will be made available to the instructor and to the Chair of the department. We intend to insure that the proposed courses adequately articulate these goals, teach toward them, test for them, and help students realize their individual potential to meet them. Assessments will be summarized and used to alter the course for the next teaching.

Curricular Map that shows how, and at what level, the program's courses facilitate students' attainment of History learning goals.
