

Biographical Paragraph for Dr. Sinnott

Dr. Sinnott is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Statistics at Ohio State and affiliated faculty with Translational Data Analytics @ Ohio State. She received her PhD in Biostatistics from Harvard University in 2012, and joined the Ohio State faculty in 2015. Her research focuses on developing statistical tools to address clinical research questions using genetic and genomic data and other high dimensional medical data sources, with a particular focus on methods relevant to cancer research. In previous years she has also taught Statistics 3202, "Introduction to Statistical Inference for Data Analytics," and Statistics 5301, "Intermediate Data Analysis I."