The Arts of Japan

This study abroad program investigates the art of Japan, with a specific emphasis on art and architecture from the 14th century to the present in Tokyo and Kyoto. Students will spend a week in May on campus doing preparatory coursework, reading and research, and will then travel with the instructor to Japan for two weeks of intensive study, including seeing artworks, temples, and shrines firsthand. After initial research in Columbus, students will each present and introduce to the group a work of art or architecture in Tokyo or Kyoto.

We will discuss historical and social contexts, Buddhist versus secular viewing settings, and the relations of power involved in the collection of “Japanese art.” The class will follow a rough chronological order while allowing the linkages between past and present to be examined, rather than obscured. No past experience in Japanese studies or art history required.

The course will be divided between a one-week intensive study session on campus and a two-week “boots-on-ground” study session in Japan. The first two weeks will provide students, through readings and assignments with ample background and ideally raise critical questions that they can explore once in Japan.

During the campus portion of the course, students will complete readings and critical response papers. In addition, each student will be responsible for researching and presenting one artwork or Buddhist site. At the end of the program, students will be required to turn in a journal describing their daily analysis of the significance of the artworks we examine in person; it will chronicle their reactions, thoughts, and questions about the material as a way of maintaining engagement throughout the course.

Dear Mark and Kirk,

At the request of the ASC Curriculum Office, I am seeking concurrence for a study abroad course to Japan (Tokyo and Kyoto) that we are proposing for next summer. Namiko Kunimoto is the faculty member who would be leading the class.

When you get the chance—ideally sometime in the next week or two—could you please let me know whether EALL concurs with the request?

Enjoy what's left of the summer!

Best wishes,

Lisa
