Description: Much of how we understand the world and the people around us emerges through rhetoric—the ways language, images, and other symbols are used to convey messages and influence people. This includes our understanding of concepts like race, gender, and ethnicity. The messages we have received about race, gender, and ethnicity shape our perceptions and expectations of the people around us, affecting the opportunities and lived experiences of everyone. Rhetoric is a particularly useful lens for examining messages about race, ethnicity, and gender because it provides tools to help us analyze how an audience is encouraged to identify with some people and against others, how matters of word choice can have immense implications, how images and spaces can suggest who is valuable and who is not, and how what is not said can be as important as what is said.

In this course, we will examine the rhetorics of race, ethnicity, gender, and other historically constituted categories as they appeared in texts, speeches, visuals, and spaces surrounding two events: the 1893 World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago and the 2016 Summer Olympics. These two events both involved spectacle and purported to represent the world; they were also both sites of persuasion, as participants and viewers were asked to accept their models of "the world," of what constitutes excellence, and of who can be excellent. In particular, in this class we will ask

- How were people understood as gendered, raced, and as belonging to particular ethnic groups through the texts, speeches, visuals, and spaces of these events? In what ways did these understandings overlap? How did they reinforce or challenge existing assumptions about members of their groups?
- What appeals or arguments appeared in the texts, speeches, visuals, and spaces of these events? How did they affect the representations of the people they discussed? How did they intentionally omit or exclude people?
- What do rhetorical analyses reveal about our perceptions and expectations of those around us?

To explore the questions outlined above, we will

- Read and view texts, speeches, visuals, and images of the spaces of the World's Columbian Exposition and the Olympics
- Discuss those texts, their contexts, and their purposes
- Read about and discuss rhetorical concepts that will help us analyze the messages that the texts, speeches, visuals, and spaces conveyed
- Write
 - Regular reading responses
 - Three rhetorical analyses
 - One take-home exam

General Education Statement: English 2XXX fulfills a requirement for a Foundations course in Race, Ethnicity, and Gender Diversity.

Goal 1: Successful students will engage in a systematic assessment of how historically and socially constituted categories of race, ethnicity, and gender, and possibly others, shape perceptions, individual outcomes, and broader societal, political, economic, and cultural systems.

Successful students are able to...

- 1.1 Describe and evaluate the social positions and representations of categories including race, gender, and ethnicity, and possibly others.
- 1.2 Explain how categories including race, gender, and ethnicity continue to function within complex systems of power to impact individual lived experiences and broader societal issues.
- 1.3 Analyze how the intersection of categories including race, gender, and ethnicity combine to shape lived experiences.
- 1.4 Evaluate social and ethical implications of studying race, gender, and ethnicity.

Goal 2: Successful students will recognize and compare a range of lived experiences of race, gender, and ethnicity.

Successful students are able to...

- 2.1 Demonstrate critical self-reflection and critique of their social positions and identities.
- 2.2 Recognize how perceptions of difference shape one's own attitudes, beliefs, or behaviors.
- 2.3 Describe how the categories of race, gender, and ethnicity influence the lived experiences of others.

Students will meet these goals by

1. Rhetorically analyzing the representations of categories including race, ethnicity, and gender (and the messages those representations convey about social positions) in a variety of texts and media, paying particular attention to how the categories intersect and combine, affecting both the messages being conveyed and the lived experiences of those being represented. (Rhetorical Analysis; Reading Responses; Class Discussion; Exam)
2. Contextualizing their analyses in historical, contemporary, and long-term ongoing systems of power. With these contexts in mind, students will consider how representations of race, ethnicity, and gender affect individuals and contribute to broader societal issues. (Rhetorical Analysis; Reading Responses; Class Discussion; Exam)
3. Reflecting on the social and ethical implications of studying race, ethnicity, and gender, in the context of particular assigned readings and in the course as a whole. (Reading Responses; Class Discussion; Exam)
4. Reflecting on how their own social positions and identities affect their understanding of and responses to the representations of race, ethnicity, and gender they read/view in class. (Reading Responses; Class Discussion)
5. Exploring the ways that the categories of race, ethnicity, and gender—as historically and socially constructed in part through the representations presented in assigned readings/viewings— influence lived experiences. (Reading Responses; Class Discussion; Exam)

Required Texts:

- The Essential Guide to Rhetoric, William M. Keith and Christian O. Lundberg ($14.99 new)
- All other readings and viewings will be available on Carmen—Bring these to class in some easily accessible format

Required Work:

Reading Responses x 10	30%
Rhetorical Analyses x 3	45%
Take-Home Exam x 1	25%
Total	100%

Reading Responses—on the dates noted on the schedule, submit (on Carmen) a one-page response to a reading from the past week. Prompts will be posted on Carmen that will ask you to do some combination of the following:

- Discuss what surprised or interested you about something you read (or viewed).
- Connect or compare one text/image to something we read/viewed earlier in the semester or to something you have read or experienced outside of class.
- Explain how this reading/image speaks to the intersections among race, ethnicity, gender, and possibly other categories.
- Select one or two sentences/passages from the text to discuss in detail.
- Connect something you read/viewed to a contemporary issue, situation, or concern.
- Explore the real-life effects that might have resulted from the representation(s) of race, ethnicity, and gender in something you read/viewed.
- Explore how your own social positions and identities affected how you understood or responded to a text/image.

This is an informal assignment, graded ✓+, ✓, or ✓-.

Rhetorical Analysis 1 asks you to study either the space/layout of the World’s Columbian Exposition or one of the images from the World’s Columbian Exhibition as a kind of “text” that conveys messages about people: who is represented? In what way? What does the space or the image suggest that a viewer should expect of the people represented? Who is excluded? (3-4 pages)

Rhetorical Analysis 2 asks you to study a speech or text by the diverse speakers from the World’s Columbian Exposition whom we have read to explain its argument and how it “works.” What does the speaker/writer say? What appeals does he/she use? How does he/she seek to identify with the audience and/or with the topic addressed? How does he/she challenge audience assumptions? (3-4 pages)

Rhetorical Analysis 3 asks you to locate and study a text or image from the 2016 Olympics to explain how it conveys messages about people involved (broadly speaking) in the Olympics. Who is represented and excluded? In what way? What appeals does the writer (or photographer, etc.) use to persuade the audience? (3-4 pages)

Specific instructions for each of the Rhetorical Analysis assignments will be provided in class.

Take-Home Exam—This open-note, open-book cumulative exam will include the following components:

- A brief (300-500 words) rhetorical analysis of a text (chosen from among a set of options provided), focusing on the ways the social positions and representations of people (including the speaker/writer, the people discussed in the text and the implied audience for the text) are constructed using words and/or images.
- Prompts for short answers (50-200 words) that ask you to consider how categories including race, gender, and ethnicity operate in the context of systems of power; how race, gender, and ethnicity intersect to shape lived experiences; and how rhetorical analyses can illuminate both the constructedness of categories such as race, gender, and ethnicity and the social and ethical implications of those constructions for individual lived experiences and social issues. In your responses, you may draw from assigned readings, class discussions, and your own experience.

Grading Scale:

A	93-100	B+	87-89	C+	77-79	D+	67-69
A-	90-92	B	83-86	C	73-76	D	60-66

Attendance:

The discussion-based, collaborative nature of this class makes attendance very important. Much of what you'll learn will grow out of class conversations or will be presented in class. Because attendance is important, we will adhere to the following attendance policy: once you accumulate 3 unexcused absences (only absences for documented illnesses, family tragedies, religious observances, or documented university-related travel will be excused), your final grade will be lowered by one-third of a letter grade (for example, from a B to a B-); each subsequent unexcused absence will lower your final grade by another third; if you accumulate 6 unexcused absences, you will fail the course. Even if your absence is excused, you are responsible for any work done or assignments made during that class.

Late Work Policy:

If circumstances arise that will keep you from submitting your work on time, contact me as soon as possible to make alternative arrangements. I will deduct one letter grade (10% of whatever the whole is worth) for each day any other assignment is late without a valid excuse.

Drop/Withdrawal Statement:

It is the student's responsibility to know the deadlines for dropping a course or withdrawing from the University. Term drop and withdrawal deadlines can be found at registrar.osu.edu/registration (click on the current term under "Important Dates" and scroll down to ADD/DROP/WITHDRAW DEADLINES). There are different drop/withdrawal dates for the various shortened sessions and full semester classes. If you receive financial aid, you should always talk with a financial aid specialist prior to adjusting your schedule. If you stop attending a course but do not drop it, you risk receiving a failing grade, which could negatively affect your GPA and your financial aid status. You can call 419-755-4317 to set up an appointment with an academic advisor or a financial aid specialist in 104 Riedl Hall.

Disability Service Statement:

The University strives to make all learning experiences as accessible as possible. If you anticipate or experience academic barriers based on

GE Foundation Courses

Overview

Courses that are accepted into the General Education (GE) Foundations provide introductory or foundational coverage of the subject of that category. Additionally, each course must meet a set of Expected Learning Outcomes (ELO). Courses may be accepted into more than one Foundation, but ELOs for each Foundation must be met. It may be helpful to consult your Director of Undergraduate Studies or appropriate support staff person as you develop and submit your course.

This form contains sections outlining the ELOs of each Foundation category. You can navigate between them using the Bookmarks function in Acrobat. Please enter text in the boxes to describe how your class meets the ELOs of the Foundation(s) to which it applies. Because this document will be used in the course review and approval process, you should use language that is clear and concise and that colleagues outside of your discipline will be able to follow. Please be as specific as possible, listing concrete activities, specific theories, names of scholars, titles of textbooks etc. Your answers will be evaluated in conjunction with the syllabus submitted for the course.
