Course Change Information

What change is being proposed? (If more than one, what changes are being proposed?)

Online teaching approval

What is the rationale for the proposed change(s)?

Teaching this course online will enable the History Department to reach a wider, more diverse audience. The online format, for example, offers flexibility to students registered with Student Life Disability Services. The online format can liberate students from the physical limitations of the classroom setting. Program 60 students who live outside of the Columbus metropolitan area, moreover, can audit the online class more easily than the traditional in-person class. This helps the History Department and the university fulfill its mission of public outreach, extending the university's resources across the state and beyond

What are the programmatic implications of the proposed change(s)?

(e.g. program requirements to be added or removed, changes to be made in available resources, effect on other programs that use the course)?

n/a

Is approval of the request contingent upon the approval of other course or curricular program request? No

Is this a request to withdraw the course? No

Course description

This course is an introduction to the salient concepts and problems involved in the study of military history from the mid-17th century to the turn of the 20th century (with additional attention to critical background in the 16th century). The most significant development during this period was the rise of the West (Europe and its settler societies, such as the United States) to global dominance. Consequently it will be a prominent course theme. We will also give extended attention to the ways in which the Age of Democratic Revolution (circa 1760-1800) and the Napoleonic Wars (1803-1815) profoundly influenced military affairs in Europe and the United States.

Students will achieve an understanding of the main developments during this period, the ways in which these developments have reflected or shaped developments in general world history, and the main interpretations advanced by scholars who have studied this subject. They will also hone their skills at critical writing and analysis, and will gain greater insight into the way historians explore the human condition.

Course learning outcomes

By the end of this course, students should successfully be able to:

Students recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected Learning Outcomes

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.

Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in their historical contexts.

Course Specific Objectives/Learning Outcomes:

1. Acquire a perspective on attempts to understand the human experience and the factors that shape human activity, particularly in time of war.
2. Develop critical thinking through the study of diverse interpretations of historical events, and gain the ability to evaluate the worth of historical analogies when applied to contemporary affairs.
3. Apply critical thinking through historical analysis of secondary sources; that is to say, sources that interpret historical events based on study of primary (e.g., eyewitness) accounts and to illuminate larger patterns in the human past.
4. Sharpen communications skills in exams, papers, discussions.
5. Develop and demonstrate an understanding of the qualities of the warrior ethos (self-discipline, determination, responsibility, honor, loyalty to comrades, etc.) as they apply in civilian life.

HOW THIS ONLINE COURSE WORKS

Mode of delivery: This course is 100 percent online. There are no required sessions when you must be logged in to Carmen at a scheduled time.

Pace of online activities: This course is divided into weekly modules that are released one week ahead of time. Students are expected to keep pace with weekly deadlines but may schedule their efforts freely within that time frame. Weekly low-stakes quizzes are given over each module to help ensure that you keep pace.

Credit hours and work expectations: This is a 3-credit-hour course. According to Ohio State policy (go.osu.edu/credithours), students should expect around 3 hours per week of time spent on direct instruction (instructor content and Carmen activities, for example) in addition to 6 hours of homework (reading and assignment preparation, for example) to receive a grade of (C) average.

Attendance and participation requirements:

Because this is an online course, your attendance is based on your online activity and participation. The following is a summary of students' expected participation:

Participating in online activities for attendance: AT LEAST ONCE PER WEEK

You are expected to log in to the course in Carmen every week. (During most weeks you will probably log in many times.) If you have a situation that might cause you to miss an entire week of class, discuss it with me as soon as possible.

- Live sessions:

Periodically I will have informal Zoom sessions in which interested students may log in to ask questions about the course, or any other history-related subject, and interact live with other students. All such sessions are optional, although I encourage you to attend at least some of them as and when you are able.

- Participating in discussion forums: 2+ TIMES PER WEEK

As part of your participation, you will be divided into groups of 5-6 students. Each week you can expect to post at least twice as part of our substantive class discussion on the week's topics. Some early discussions will focus on getting to know the other students in your group better. Please take full opportunity to do this. Establishing a good rapport with other students decreases the sometimes impersonal nature of online courses and leads to more robust, productive discussions as the course proceeds.

How your grade is calculated

ASSIGNMENT CATEGORY	POINTS
Weekly quizzes – 10 points each. These typically consist of multiple choice, true/false, and ordering questions that can be auto-graded by Carmen, but may also include open-ended questions such as, “What was the most striking thing you learned from this week’s module?”	150
Surveys. These vary in point value but total 50 points. When you complete and submit the survey (by the deadline) you receive the full point value for that survey. Survey topics typically include requests for course feedback using the same questions as on the Student Evaluation of Instruction (SEI) and questions specific to the progress of the course.	50
Participation in Discussion. Your grade is based on your overall performance. Superior performance receives 100 points; performance that meets the standard receives 88 points; sub-par but acceptable performance receives 70 points; inadequate performance receives 50 points or below.	100
Personal Challenge Assignment. Information and instructions about this assignment are in the document of the same name. Three progress reports of about 500 words each are required.	100
Midterm Examination. This consists of an essay response worth 60 percent of the total exam grade and an “objective” exam worth 40 percent. EXAM DATE	250
Final Examination. This consists of an essay response worth 60 percent of the total exam grade and an “objective” exam worth 40 percent. EXAM DATE	350
Total	1000

See course schedule below for due dates.

Please pay careful attention to the following expectations concerning academic integrity.

- Quizzes and exams: You must complete the quizzes, midterm and final exams yourself, without any external help or communication.
- Written assignments: Your written assignments, including discussion posts, should be your own original work. You are encouraged to ask a trusted person to proofread your assignments before you turn them in, but no one else should revise or rewrite your work.
- Collaboration and informal peer-review: The course includes many opportunities for formal collaboration with your classmates. While study groups and peer-review of major written projects is encouraged, remember that comparing answers on a quiz or assignment is not permitted. If you're unsure about a particular situation, please ask ahead of time.

Late assignments

Except in extraordinary situations, late submissions will not be accepted. Failures to understand how to navigate Carmen or claims of last-minute glitches with Carmen do not constitute extraordinary situations. Please refer to Carmen for due dates/times, and do not wait until the last minute to submit assignments.

OTHER COURSE POLICIES

Discussion and communication guidelines

The following are my expectations for how we should communicate as a class. Above all, please remember to be respectful and thoughtful.

- Writing style: While there is no need to participate in class discussions as if you were writing a research paper, you should remember to write using good grammar, spelling, and punctuation. A more conversational tone is fine for non-academic topics.
- Tone and civility: I encourage vigorous discussion. That said, vigorous discussion has some potential for verging upon incivility particularly since discussion posts can be a somewhat tone-deaf medium. Humor based on sarcasm, for example, does not always come across online.
- Backing up your work: Consider composing your academic posts in a word processor, where you can save your work, and then copying into the Carmen discussion. Remember Murphy's Law: "If anything can go wrong it will."

Academic integrity policy

See Descriptions of major course assignments, above, for my specific guidelines about collaboration and academic integrity in the context of this online class.

It is the responsibility of the Committee on Academic Misconduct to investigate or establish procedures for the investigation of all reported cases of student academic misconduct. The term "academic misconduct" includes all forms of student academic misconduct wherever committed; illustrated by, but not limited to, cases of plagiarism and dishonest practices in connection with examinations. Instructors shall report all instances of alleged academic misconduct to the committee (Faculty Rule 3335-5-487). For additional information, see the Code of Student Conduct <http://studentlife.osu.edu/csc/>.

If I suspect that a student has committed academic misconduct in this course, I am obligated by university rules to report my suspicions to the Committee on Academic Misconduct. If COAM determines that you have violated the university's Code of Student Conduct (i.e., committed academic misconduct), the sanctions for the misconduct could include a failing grade in this course and suspension or dismissal from the university.

If you have any questions about the above policy or what constitutes academic misconduct in this course, please contact me.

Other sources of information on academic misconduct (integrity) to which you can refer include:

Your mental health

As a student you may experience a range of issues that can cause barriers to learn, such as strained relationships, increased anxiety, alcohol/drug problems, feeling down, difficulty concentrating and/or lack of motivation. These mental health concerns or stressful events may lead to diminished academic performance or reduce a student's ability to participate in daily activities. No matter where you are engaged in distance learning, The Ohio State University's Student Life Counseling and Consultation Service (CCS) is here to support you. If you find yourself feeling isolated, anxious or overwhelmed, on-demand resources are available at go.osu.edu/ccsondemand. You can reach an on-call counselor when CCS is closed at 614- 292-5766, and 24-hour emergency help is also available through the 24/7 National Prevention Hotline at 1-800-273-TALK or at suicidepreventionlifeline.org. The Ohio State Wellness app is also a great resource available at go.osu.edu/wellnessapp.

ACCESSIBILITY ACCOMMODATIONS FOR STUDENTS WITH DISABILITIES

Requesting accommodations

The university strives to make all learning experiences as accessible as possible. Course Description

Description and philosophy:

History 3551 explores the history of warfare in a global context from the aftermath of the Thirty Years War and the Revolt of the Netherlands in Europe and the consolidation of Manchu power in China to the aftermath of the 1864-72 Wars of German Unification in Europe and the outward expansion of Meiji Japan in the 1894-95 Sino-Japanese War. In between, the course addresses the Anglo-Dutch Wars (1652-74); the Ottoman Empire's wars with Venice and the Austrian Habsburgs; Vietnam's southward expansion, Civil War and repulse of Chinese invasion; the Luso-Dutch struggle for colonial possessions; the Wars of Louis the XIV; England's expansion abroad; the American Revolution; the Wars of the French Revolution and Napoleon (1792-1815); and America's Mexican War and Civil War (1861-78).

History 3551 proceeds on the assumption that war is not an end in itself, but serves as a means to political ends, defined to include the use of political power for social, economic and cultural purposes. The course addresses field warfare, siege or positional warfare, the war of economic attrition and guerrilla warfare as distinct branches of military theory and practice. It addresses warfare at sea as well as on land.

While not neglecting the political and operational dimensions of war, History 3551 is organized on the assumption that war is, at base, a social phenomenon. Examination of the reasons that peoples and nations go to war and how those reasons vary from culture to culture and change over time is an underlying course theme. The course features in-depth analysis of selected military engagements as a means of better understanding of the dynamics of war. Topics of particular interest are the psychology of war, with emphasis on the social dynamics of the primary combatant group; the development and application—or misapplication—of military technology; the tactical means by which armed force and forces were applied; the relationships among these psychological, tactical and technological factors, and the recognition and exploitation of these considerations by leaders in developing and implementing strategies.

Course objectives:

The principal objective is to familiarize the student with the ebb and flow of warfare across the globe in terms of the themes outlined above and to develop and refine an understanding of the nature of war and its capabilities and limitations as an instrument of policy. The student should also develop an understanding of the role of cultural factors, particularly cross-cultural perceptions and misperceptions, in the formulation of policy and conduct of war.

Historical Study Goal:

Students should recognize how past events are studied and how they influence today's society and the human condition.

Expected learning outcomes:

1. Students construct an integrated perspective on history and the factors that shape human activity.
2. Students describe and analyze the origins and nature of contemporary issues.
3. Students speak and write critically about primary and secondary historical sources by examining diverse interpretations of past events and ideas in historical context.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Historical Study:

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes: History courses develop students; knowledge of how past events influence today's society and help them understand how humans view themselves through the following ways:

1. Critically examine theories of history and historical methodologies. Theories of history: The course approaches the study of war with the working assumption that war is, at base, a social phenomenon. It approaches the study of peoples and nations as a series of historical questions in which the understanding of culture is central to understanding the historical process. Historical methods: The course combines a broad overview of the course and conduct of the wars under examination with selected case studies of particularly important and/or illustrative political events, military campaigns and battles that explore in depth the goals and motivations of the actors, the factors that combined to produce the results and the ensuing consequences.
2. Engage with contemporary and historical debates on specific regions, time periods and themes of the human past. Historical debates: The course examines debates over war's causes and how they changed over time. Contemporary debates: Attention to the ongoing debate over the legitimacy and effectiveness of the use of military force as an instrument of foreign and domestic policy and how knowledge of the conflicts addressed in the course can inform that debate is an underlying theme for the entire course.

Diversity/Global Studies Goals:

Students should understand the pluralistic nature of institutions, society and culture in the United States and abroad in order to become educated, productive and principled citizens.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

1. Students should understand the political, economic, cultural, physical, social and philosophical aspects of the nations and cultures addressed in the course.
2. Students should recognize the role of national and international diversity in shaping their own attitudes and values.

Rationale for fulfilling the GE Learning Outcomes for Global Studies:

Goals of the course that fulfill the GE Learning Outcomes in Global Studies

1. Students should critically examine political, economic, cultural and philosophical developments among nations and peoples addressed in the course through assigned readings.
2. Students should engage with contemporary and historical debates on differences and similarities among cultures and peoples.
3. Critically examining ethnically, nationally or religiously framed movements in a wide socio-cultural and global context. These factors played large in the conflicts covered in the course and deserve appropriate attention.
4. Conduct in-depth analyses in the course presentations and research papers comparing political and military movements and how they shaped history.
5. Students will better understand the complexities of debates over international issues, including the impact of war on the historical process through the course readings, lectures and classroom discussions.

6. Students should better understand the roots and structures of contemporary globalization through analysis of the course material.

Syllabus:

This syllabus is the basic guide to History 3551. In addition to laying out course requirements, schedule and reading assignments, it embodies an expanded outline of the subject matter and an implicit guide to course methodology.

Course rules and requirements:

History 3551 has two midterms, a final exam and a comparative review of two books on related topics. You must complete both midterms the book review and the final exam to receive a grade. Classroom attendance is expected. You must pay your course fees to receive a grade.

Written exercises:

The comparative book review will be 8-10 pages long. The review will include a bibliography and must be documented according to a recognized scholarly method of source attribution. Footnotes, endnotes, or both may be used as appropriate.

Scheduling and administration:

Class meets 0900-1055 (9:00-10:55 am) on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Journalism, Room 0251. My office is 148 Dulles Hall. Office hours are Thursdays 1300-1430 (1:00-2:30 pm). Students unable to meet with at that time may make individual arrangements. Lectures and classroom discussions may be tape recorded with my permission. Enrollment is your responsibility; you should be enrolled by the end of the second full week of the quarter, that is by close of business Friday 17 January. Subsequent enrollment will require a Late Add Petition.

Attendance and research paper submission:

Illness is usually the only acceptable excuse for absence. Other absences (e.g. military service) must be explained to my satisfaction. Unexcused absences will result in a reduced grade. Research papers are due in class on Thursday 17 April. Late submission will result in a reduced grade.

Disability Statement:

The University strives to make all learning experiences as accessible as possible. If you anticipate or experience academic barriers based on your disability (including mental health, chronic or temporary medical conditions), please let me know immediately so that we can privately discuss options. To establish reasonable accommodations, I may request that you register with Student Life Disability Services. Texts (on sale at the Student Book Exchange):

Jeremy Black, European Warfare, 1660-1815 [required].

Colin McEvedy, The Penguin Atlas of Modern History to 1815 [required].

— The Penguin Atlas of Recent History [required]

— The Penguin Atlas of North American History to 1870 [required]

Gunther E. Rothenberg, The Art of Warfare in the Age of Napoleon [optional]

Grading and Examinations:

The examinations are designed to test your ability to organize, analyze, and explain what you know more than to find out what you do not know. They contain a relatively small number of "objective" questions (short answer identifications and definitions, map questions and so on) and are based on one page essay questions.

The midterms and final will require you to answer from four out of six to six out of ten short answer questions and write three one-page essays. The one page essay questions must be answered on a single sheet of paper (the same size as this one) with allowances for those with large handwriting. You will typically have ten to twelve options from which to select the three essays. Some questions require you to display or interpret information on maps or diagrams. You will be required to answer one or two of these. One of the one page essays will be a notional scenario question requiring you to put yourself in the place of a historical actor and describe his or her circumstances and reaction to them. The subjects of notional scenario questions are ordinary civilians and combatants, male and female. The large number of options provides a positive incentive for increasing your depth of knowledge and understanding of selected portions of the course material, as opposed to superficially covering a greater breadth of material. In practical terms, this means that placing increased study effort in areas of particular interest to you should help rather than hurt you.

Instructor Presence

For more on instructor presence: <https://teaching.resources.osu.edu/teaching-topics/online-instructor-presence>

Students should have opportunities for regular and substantive academic interactions with the course instructor. Some ways to achieve this objective:

Regular instructor communications with the class via announcements or weekly check-ins

Instructional content, such as video, audio, or interactive lessons, that is visibly created or mediated by the instructor

Regular participation in class discussion, such as in Carmen discussions or synchronous sessions

Regular opportunities for students to receive personal instructor feedback on assignments

Course credit hours align with estimated average weekly time to complete the course successfully.

Course includes direct (equivalent of “in-class”) and indirect (equivalent of “out-of-class”) instruction at a ratio of about 1:2.

Provide a brief outline of a typical course week, categorizing course activities and estimating the approximate time to complete them or participate:

In the case of course delivery change requests, the course demonstrates comparable rigor in meeting course learning outcomes.

Accessibility

Additional comments:

Frequent, Varied Assignments/Assessments

For more information: <https://teaching.resources.osu.edu/teaching-topics/designing-assessments-student>

Student success in online courses is maximized when there are frequent, varied learning activities. Possible approaches:

Opportunities for students to receive course information through a variety of different sources, including indirect sources, such as textbooks and lectures, and direct sources, such as scholarly resources and field observation

Variety of assignment formats to provide students with multiple means of demonstrating learning

Opportunities for students to apply course knowledge and skills to authentic, real-world tasks in assignments

Comment briefly on the frequency and variety of assignment types and assessment approaches used in this course (or select methods above):

Community Building

For more information: <https://teaching.resources.osu.edu/teaching-topics/student-interaction-online>

Students engage more fully in courses when they have an opportunity to interact with their peers and feel they are part of a community of learners. Possible approaches:

Opportunities for students to interact academically with classmates through regular class discussion or group assignments

Opportunities for students to interact socially with classmates, such as through video conference sessions or a course Q&A forum

Attention is paid to other ways to minimize transactional distance (psychological and communicative gaps between students and their peers, instructor, course content, and institution)

Please comment on this dimension of the proposed course (or select methods above):

Transparency and Metacognitive Explanations

For more information: <https://teaching.resources.osu.edu/teaching-topics/supporting-student-learning-your>

Students have successful, meaningful experiences when they understand how the components of a course connect together, when they have guidance on how to study, and when they are encouraged to take ownership of their learning. Possible approaches:

Instructor explanations about the learning goals and overall design or organization of the course

Context or rationale to explain the purpose and relevance of major tasks and assignments

Guidance or resources for ancillary skills necessary to complete assignments, such as conducting library research or using technology tools

Opportunities for students to take ownership or leadership in their learning, such as by choosing topics of interest for an assignment or leading a group discussion or meeting

Opportunities for students to reflect on their learning process, including their goals, study strategies, and progress

Opportunities for students to provide feedback on the course
