Proposed Revisions to Undergraduate Bachelor of Arts in International Studies Degree

1 General Information

Name of revised major: Bachelor of International Studies (unchanged)
Degree to be received: Bachelor Arts
Proposed Implementation date: August 15, 2023
Academic Units: Undergraduate International Studies Program / Social and Behavioral Sciences / ASC

2 Rationale

The curriculum underlying the Bachelor of Arts degree in International Studies has not undergone a foundational review in many, many years.<sup>1</sup> Instead, the program has evolved over the years through a process of accretion, wherein new “tracks” have been added as options for students to pursue, reflecting changes in the broader academic world, our society, and the needs of potential employers. While this has in many ways led to a diverse, interdisciplinary experience for our graduates, it has also come at some cost in terms of intellectual coherence, consistency, and the ability to highlight relevant skills for potential post-baccalaureate employers. At the same time, some of the core classes for several of the tracks are no longer offered, and alternatives have had to be approved on an

<sup>1</sup> As it is currently structured, the Bachelor of Arts degree in International Studies has two pre-major requirements: four semesters of foreign language (or a minor or major in a foreign language), and two general education pre-major courses (which vary by the track in question). International Studies majors select a track that guides the structure of their major program. The options are: (1) African Studies, (2) Development Studies, (3) East Asian Studies, (4) Globalization, (5) International Relations and Diplomacy, (6) Latin American Studies, (7) Middle East Studies, (8) Security and Intelligence, (9) Slavic and East European Studies, (10) West European Studies, and (11) World Economy and Business. Following this, 12 credit hours of required “foundations” courses must be completed in the major, alongside 12 credit hours of “critical perspectives” classes selected from set of relevant offerings, followed by 6 more “elective” credit hours from a more expansive set of selections.

ad-hoc fashion. This revision is geared toward creating a coherent, up-to-date, undergraduate BA degree in International Studies. It will introduce a shared cross-track core curriculum, completely redo the course options for each track (to reflect the current offerings of the more than 20 departments that contribute classes to the IS major), and for the first time, permit students to identify two core competencies in a transcriptable fashion.

The foundation for the revisions to the undergraduate major in International Studies builds centrally on the recommendations made during our decennial external review, and the resulting action plan (action plan approved in March 2021). Three principal recommendations from the external review have guided the revision that follows:

1. There are currently eleven distinct tracks in the current International Studies BA degree.<sup>2</sup> In practice, however, the six area-studies focused tracks attract few students. Almost all majors specialize in the ‘thematic’ tracks (e.g., World Economy and Business, Security and Intelligence, International Relations, and Diplomacy, etc.). The reviewers recommend an effort to revitalize the area studies side of the IS degree program.
2. The current tracks each have entirely distinct, and complex, curricular requirements. The reviewers recommended that this be simplified, and that students be asked to fulfill credit-hour requirements in two distinct tracks (from among any of the area studies and thematic alternatives).
3. To improve coherence of the major across the various tracks, it was suggested that the UISP introduce a shared core curriculum (including introductory and capstone classes) that would be required of all majors, regardless of their specializations.

The move to a shared core curriculum wedded to a requirement that students specialize in (at least) two of the tracks is our strategy for implementing this advice. The core curriculum—and especially the introduction of a writing-intensive capstone course—will ensure that there is an identifiable common core to an IS major. At the same time, the dual specializations should help to revitalize the area-studies component that is central to any international studies curriculum. It is our expectation that students will most typically select a single thematic specialization and link it with a second geographic focus.<sup>3</sup> In practice, most of our students do in fact have a geographic area of interest/expertise, but they typically select a thematic track as they view this as more marketable in the post-college employment arena. By organizing our major around dual concentrations, the students will have a transcriptable mechanism for identifying for potential employers precisely what skill sets they have acquired.

<sup>2</sup> There are also 3 additional thematic areas that up to this point have existed only as minors (Human Rights; Information Security; and International Conflict and Peace). These will be adapted to become tracks for the IS major. As is the case for existing minors that parallel tracks in the major, no student may pursue a minor in a concentration that is being used to fulfill one of the two concentrations in the major track.

<sup>3</sup> This structure is similar to the way in which the IS major at Stanford University is constructed, and this thematic-cum-area selection is made by the vast majority of majors.

An alternative approach might mandate that students pursue one area-studies and one thematic concentration. This was considered during the process of developing this reform, but was ultimately discarded for several reasons. First, the recommendation from the external review was to encourage the combination of thematic and area studies tracks by students. The external review committee was confident that this would provide for transformational improvement in area-studies uptake among the students. At the same time, however, the external review (and the UISP concurs with this) also emphasized an overall de-regulatory and de-complexifying imperative for the UISP's major requirements. The inclusion of a mandate for only theme/area combinations runs counter to this effort, as well as precluding the occasionally reasonable theme/theme and area/area combinations that students might select. Second, we envision that the selection of a theme/area combination will be the predominant approach among students, and we will organize our advising around the logic and benefits of such a structure. But we also wish to make room for the occasional deviation from this structure—by way of example, it might be entirely reasonable in the case of a double major in Near East and South Asian languages and International Studies, for the latter degree to comprise two thematic concentrations. Similarly, an AED economics and International Studies major might opt for two area concentrations to complement a theoretical interest in development economics. As quite a large number of our students are double majors, we think this flexibility is vital.

A secondary rationale for this overall programmatic structure is to better insert the UISP into the broader university. The teaching side of the UISP historically has spanned the spectrum from area-studies classes to research methodology, to various specialty courses (e.g., cyber-security, intelligence), to peace studies and international relations. Some of these duplicate (to differing degrees) offerings available elsewhere in the university in its myriad departments in the Arts and Humanities; Social and Behavioral Sciences; and Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences. With our curricular restructuring, the UISP will focus its teaching resources on two areas—the core introductory and capstone classes, and specialty classes not offered elsewhere in the university. We expect that most credits used to complete the dual-track requirements will be taken in the form of regular departmental courses in the colleges identified above. This will allow the UISP to emphasize its essential interdisciplinary focus while at the same time utilizing the myriad disciplinary resources to be found on our campus. It is our hope that this will generate a positive-sum relationship among departments and the UISP, rather than the sometimes-competitive environment of the past.

3 Description of Proposed Curriculum

The revised major in International Studies thus has at its core a set of shared courses (amounting to 9 credits) that will be taken by all majors, a primary concentration in one of fourteen tracks (15 credit hours), and a secondary concentration in another of these tracks (9 credit hours). For each of the fourteen tracks, International Studies will maintain a curated list of courses from across the university that are both taught regularly and fulfill the requirements for concentration in that track. We expect to update these lists annually in an in-house process to account for the occasional elimination of courses or arrival of new options in relevant university departments.

There is a language requirement that is external to the major. This requirement—unchanged from the status quo—requires either the equivalent of four semesters of a world language instruction (via coursework and/or placement testing), or the completion of a minor degree in a language, or a second major in a language. The specific language that is selected is expected to be relevant to the students’ course of study but is otherwise unrestricted.

In schematic form, the revised major would follow the pattern below.

Language requirement: Four semesters of a single world language, or a language minor, or a language major. Requirement may be fulfilled by any combination of coursework at OSU, coursework at another institution (foreign or domestic), or placement examination.

Core Requirements: (9 credit hours).

- Introduction to Globalization (INTSTDS 3850), 3 credits.
- Research in Globalization (Capstone Writing Course) (INTSTDS 4852), 3 credits.
- Data Visualization and Methods (choose one)
  - GEOG 4103 (3credits), or
  - INTSTDS 3400 (3 credits), or
  - POLITSC 3780 (3 credits), or
  - SOCIOL 5650 (3 credits)

Embedded Literacies: The advanced writing embedded literacy will be fulfilled by INTSTDS 4852. The data analysis embedded literacy will be fulfilled by any one of the four options above that fulfill the “Data Visualization and Methods” requirement. The technology embedded literacy will be fulfilled by taking any one of the follow courses: (1) INTSTDS 3703 (“Ethical Issues in the Information Age”)<sup>4</sup>, (2) SOCIOL 3302 (“Technology and Society”), (3) COMM 3554 (“Social Implications of Communication Technology”), or (4) INTSTDS 4701 (“Development and Control of Weapons of Mass Destruction”).

First Concentration: (15 credit hours).

Students must complete 15 credit hours from among the courses included in the options for their first concentration. Available concentrations include: (1) African Studies, (2) Development Studies, (3) East Asian Studies, (4) Globalization, (5) Human Rights, (6) Information Security, (7) International Conflict & Peace Studies, (8) International Relations and Diplomacy, (9) Latin American Studies, (10) Middle East Studies, (11) Security and Intelligence, (12) Slavic and East European Studies, (13) West <sup>4</sup> This is a new course that is currently in the approval process.

European Studies, and (14) World Economy and Business.

The International Studies program has developed the list of courses that count in each concentration from among the offerings of appropriate university departments. This determination has been made in consultation with the many relevant departments to ensure that all appropriate classes are included, they are taught regularly, and are open to students outside the department in question. The current list is appended to this document, but it is expected to be updated in an ongoing fashion to reflect new offerings, or to remove courses that are no longer available.

Second Concentration: (9 credit hours).

Students must complete 9 credit hours from among the courses included in the options for their second concentration. Available concentrations include: (1) African Studies, (2) Development Studies, (3) East Asian Studies, (4) Globalization, (5) Human Rights, (6) Information Security, (7) International Conflict and Peace Studies, (8) International Relations and Diplomacy, (9) Latin American Studies, (10) Middle East Studies, (11) Security and Intelligence, (12) Slavic and East European Studies, (13) West European Studies, and (14) World Economy and Business. The sole caveats are that the second concentration must be distinct from the first concentration, and that no course that counts for the first concentration can be used to fulfill requirements for the second concentration, and vice-versa.

The International Studies program has developed the list of courses that count in each concentration from among the offerings of appropriate university departments. This determination has been made in consultation with the relevant departments to ensure that all appropriate classes are included, that they are taught regularly, and that they are open to students outside the department in question. The current list is appended to this document, and it reflects the many relevant new courses suggested by various departments during consultations in Autumn 2021. It also reflects the deletion of courses that are no longer offered with any frequency. These lists of course options for each track will be updated at least annually in an ongoing fashion to reflect new offerings or courses no longer available.

4 Goals/Objectives and Evaluation of the Program

As this is a restructure of the major, as opposed to being a new program proposal, three of the four existing expected learning outcomes (ELOs) for the major are being retained.

The three retained ELOs are:

1. Students show an ability to analyze and draw conclusions about international events and developments employing multiple analytical perspectives.
2. Students show an understanding of the diversity of cultures, ideas, and practices across the world.

3. Students are prepared for diverse types of employment and/or graduate-level education programs.

The following ELO will not be retained:

Students demonstrate proficiency in a foreign language appropriate to their specialization.

This ELO is being dropped because completion of a foreign language minor is no longer required of International Studies BA degree students. This is in accordance with suggestions made in the 2019 External Review.

The three retained ELOs are a distillation of the larger number of ELOs that appeared on the specialization curriculum maps from the conversion to semesters in 2011-2012. As an example of specialization ELOs not retained, the two listed from the African Studies specialization were:

E. Students develop an interdisciplinary understanding of the region's cultures, history, and economic and political trajectories.

F. Students analyze the dynamic interplay of economic, political, and social systems in Africa.

It was determined the retained ELOS 1 and 2 are sufficiently similar to these as to make separate assessment redundant. For the unit-as-a-whole, the capstone INTSTDS 4852 Research in Globalization class is planned to serve as the umbrella assessment class. It is now to be discussed.

UNIT ASSESSMENT

The capstone class for all 14 major specializations in this proposal is International Studies 4852, Research in Globalization. All students will be required to take this class. The class will be assessed for the three department ELOs discussed above and also for the Embedded Literacy Advanced Writing Requirement.

In the 4852 class, the theories and issues introduced in the International Studies 3850 Introduction to Globalization class will provide the foundation for the theories and issues presented in the 4852 class. Thus, a foundational set of research topics will be at hand for the students. Additionally, many students will have found topics of interest from other classes they have taken for their major. Deeper exploration of such topics will be encouraged in the 4852 class. In total, there will be flexibility in the choice of research topics based upon student interest.

All students in the class will write a 12–15-page research paper evaluated using a Rubric Direct Assessment methodology. Building up to the research paper there will be short papers discussing the issue being explored, theoretical perspectives relevant to the issue in question, a preliminary review of the literature discussing the issue, and the student's point of view and thoughts on the issue. Data and evidence must be presented in the research paper in support of the student's position on the issue. Also, data and evidence not in support of the student's point of view must be presented and considered. The careful consideration of opposing points of view and interpretation of data and events is central to preparation for careers in both the public and private sectors. This class will provide such an experience for the student.

OTHER ASSESSMENT ACTIVITIES

In addition to the above-discussed unit assessment, International Studies also employs both Direct and Indirect assessment measures in its annual reports. Typically, two classes are evaluated with direct methods each year, to be discussed below. Both direct and indirect data is gathered from a department-administered Graduating Student Exit Survey and the College of Arts and Sciences Graduation Survey Report (where an INTSTDS BA Additional Questions section is included).

In the cases of direct assessment of classes, the method used varies by class and instructor inclination. Examples from the last three academic years include:

International Studies 5701, Intelligence and National Security in a Changing World. This class was evaluated using a rubric methodology where students write a mock “President’s Daily Brief” under the strictures of appropriate format, logical analysis (and counter-analysis), rules of evidence and writing mechanicals. This exercise relates directly to ELO 1. In as much as the behaviors and reactions of foreign leaders must be considered, ELO 2 is also involved. The Achievement Minimal Criteria was 60% of students earning a grade of at least a B on the assignment (90% achievement was recorded) (2020-2021 Assessment Report).

International Studies 3701, Introduction to Homeland Security. A direct method of Certification or Licensure Examination was applied. As part of the class, four Federal Emergency Management Administration (FEMA) Incident Command certificate courses were assigned. These certifications aid students seeking employment in the Department of Homeland Security (nationally or state-based) by validating understanding of nomenclature, structure, mission and processes of the agency. This exercise was most strongly related to ELO 3. Minimum Achievement desired was 70% of students earning these certifications (100% was achieved) (2019-2020 Assessment Report).

International Studies 2050, Introduction to China and Japan. In this case a pre-test/post-test direct assessment method was utilized. Five questions based upon historical content and five questions based upon theoretical content were used in the tests. Over the total of ten questions, the class average rose from 3 to 8 correct answers. This exercise directly addressed ELO 2, with connection to ELO 1 (2018-2019 Assessment Report).

It is the plan of the unit to continue to have classes assessed using direct assessment methods every year.

In the category of indirect assessment, much data is gathered from surveys of graduating students. Several examples of this ongoing process will be presented.

ELO 1 is evaluated yearly in the Arts and Sciences Graduation Survey where the three following questions are asked of the students and their responses tabulated on a 5 Point Likert scale.

The questions are: “To what extent has your major improved your ability to...

1. analyze and interpret the various kinds of data that inform debates in International Studies?”
2. engage objectively and critically debates about world problems and their solution?”
3. analyze and evaluate diverse, sometimes contradictory explanations and interpretations of international events and developments?

The Likert scale is of standard construction with a score of 1 being “Not at all” and 5 being “A great extent.” A minimum achievement criterion of 66.6% answering 4 or 5 is sought. In the 2020-2021 ASC report the respective scores were: 1. 85%; 2. 92%; 3. 92%.

ELO 2 is also probed in the Arts and Sciences Graduation Survey, again with the 5 Point Likert scale.

Those questions are: “To what extent has your major improved...

1. your understanding of concepts and theoretical frameworks that promote appreciation of foreign cultures, peoples, and the world in which they live?”
2. your knowledge, understanding and appreciation of other cultures and peoples, the region in which they live and the place of the region in the world?”

Also, in support of ELO 2, data on student participation in education abroad experiences is gathered from the department exit survey.

To assess ELO 3 data is garnered from a variety of sources. They include the department administered Exit Survey and the ASC Graduation Survey

An indirect measure in the ASC exit survey asks: “Overall, my major courses were effective in preparing me for employment or graduate studies.” This is again measured on the 5 Point Likert scale (79% answering at the 4 or 5 level in the 2020-2021 survey).

More directly, the International Studies and ASC surveys seek such data by inquiring about participation in internships, jobs, or application to graduate schools. This data is regularly included in the unit’s annual assessment report.

Under the restructuring of the major, it is the plan of the unit to continue with the above-mentioned assessment efforts.

USE OF ASSESSMENT RESULTS

Assessment results will be discussed with instructors on a systematic basis. Suggestions will be made to improve student class performance. The integration of the course with three retained unit ELOs will also be discussed and suggestions given to enhance that effort.

In particular, where assessment data suggest that lacunae exist in accomplishing any of the ELOs applicable to the course, these will be identified in writing for the instructors of record, and they will be asked to develop a plan to guide improvement in achieving the ELOs. This will be submitted to the UISP director and subject to her or his approval. She/he may add additional strategies for achieving success in the achievement of ELOs in consultation with the relevant instructor(s). Any course having been asked to undertake such a plan will be re-assessed at the next available opportunity to determine whether progress is being made. The time frame for re-assessment will depend on the frequency with which the course is offered.

5 Relationship to Other Programs

As an interdisciplinary major, International Studies has long had a tight relationship to other programs, especially departments in Arts and Sciences, Humanities, and to a lesser extent Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences and Engineering. The recent external review noted the importance of this relationship, and one of the principal goals of this curricular reform is to strengthen the ties between international studies and its partner departments.

The basic approach that is taken is to reshape the offerings of the International Studies program (in conjunction with the curricular reform) so that instead of teaching courses across the gamut of International Studies using instructors from within the program, we will instead focus our instructors in two areas: (1) core classes that provide the unifying scaffolding upon which the major is built, and (2) specialty classes that are necessary for some major and minor program tracks, but are not available elsewhere in the university.

By contrast, we expect the vast majority of courses fulfilling the credit-hour requirements for the two concentrations that students must select will be provided by regular OSU departments (see attached advising sheets). These are to be selected from curated lists of courses that are regularly taught across myriad departments that are applicable to each concentration. That is, we will provide a list of courses that can be taken for each concentration within International Studies but leave the selection of specific courses in specific departments up to the students. This allows them greater ability to tailor their study to their interests, within a broader shared understanding of International Studies that is provided by the core, methods, and capstone classes.

We aim to be expansive in constructing the lists of specific courses that are applicable to each concentration, relying principally on data from the university registrar as to which courses are offered with sufficient regularity as well as the preferences of the departments themselves (not wanting to tax resources excessively where this is not desired). We will update these concentration lists annually in partnership with departments as potentially-applicable new courses enter service, while removing those that are no longer regularly offered. This will be an in-house administrative process as it does not affect the structure of the major and is simply an updating activity.

6 Detailed Curriculum Description and Sample Major

WORLD LANGUAGE

All students must complete two full years of training in a single world language. This is the existing requirement. Students also have the choice of completing a minor or a second major in a language as an alternative means to fulfill this requirement. Coursework completed at OSU, abroad, and/or appropriate placement test results can document this. Four semesters of a world language are a major co-requisite; however, they need not be completed before declaring the major or taking classes in the major.

DELETION OF “PREMAJOR” COURSES

In this proposal we no longer require two general education pre-major courses (the status quo). The forward-looking logic behind this decisions was fourfold. First, there are no two courses that are clearly relevant as pre-requisites across the many different specializations within International Studies from which students will select. Second, retaining track-specific pre-requisites would be intractable, insofar as it would require harmonization across the two tracks that a student selects, and would add tremendous complexity to the advising process (as well as potentially posing a serious barrier to changing thematic or area focus during the course of a student’s study). Third, consultation with the instructional staff suggested that the (non-language) pre-requisites contributed little to no value added to the content of the major or the progression of students through more advanced courses. Finally, it has been our experience that introductory level GE classes are sometimes a barrier to timely completion of the degree. Insofar as many students rush to fulfill them at the end of their course of studies, they provide no benefit in terms of the progress through the degree. And as availability of specific GE courses is limited, they can further serve as a barrier to timely graduation.

At the same time, the logic of the previous pre-requisite requirement was largely a by-product of the old structure of the major. The proposed major does not have the individual Required Foundations section of four classes for each specialization as seen in the existing major. In many cases, the pre-major classes were simply the prerequisites as defined by the offering units of required major classes.(i.e. PSYCH 1100 for PSYCH 4525 for the S&I specialization; POLITSC 1300 for POLITSC 4300 in the IRD specialization; ECON 2001.XX and 2002.XX for ECON/INTSTDS 4560 in the WEB specialization., etc.). They would have been de facto pre-requisites whether included in the curriculum structure or not. With the new organization, students will have much more flexibility in selecting courses for their two specializations under this revision, and hence will have the option of not taking the courses that (for reasons pertaining to units outside UISP) had prerequisites.

The other cases of pre-major courses being deleted are the History courses that can be seen in many of the specializations. Given the number of courses in the major itself is being raised from ten to eleven, and in the spirit of the reduced number of courses required under the Autumn 2022 New General Education curriculum, the unit wishes to grant its students additional flexibility in the construction of their total undergraduate education by keeping required coursework outside of the major itself to a minimum.

REQUIRED FOUNDATIONS

International Studies majors must complete three required courses: 9 hours

1. International Studies 3850 Introduction to Globalization (3)
2. International Studies 4852 Research in Globalization (3)
3. Methods & Analysis: 3 hours (choose one)
  - Geography 4103                      Introductory Spatial Analysis (3)
  - International Studies 3400      The Analysis & Display of Data (3)
  - Political Science 3780            Data Literacy & Data Visualization (3)
  - Sociology 5650                    Presenting and Communicating Quantitative Data (3)

Typically, Introduction to Globalization will be taken early in a student's course of study, while the Capstone Writing Course (INTSTD 4852) will be taken toward the end.

SPECIALIZATIONS

International Studies is organized around thematic and regional specializations. Students must select a PRIMARY and SECONDARY specialization from among the options listed below.

- Primary Specialization: Choose five courses: 15 hours
- Secondary Specialization: Choose three courses: 9 hours

Please consult specialization descriptions for a complete listing of courses available.

Specialization Options (all can be primary or secondary):

- AFRICAN STUDIES
- DEVELOPMENT STUDIES
- EAST ASIAN STUDIES
- GLOBALIZATION
- HUMAN RIGHTS
- INFORMATION SECURITY
- INTERNATIONAL CONFLICT & PEACE STUDIES
- INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS & DIPLOMACY
- LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES
- MIDDLE EAST STUDIES
- SECURITY & INTELLIGENCE
- SLAVIC & EAST EUROPEAN STUDIES

- WEST EUROPEAN STUDIES
- WORLD ECONOMY & BUSINESS

GENERAL REQUIREMENTS

- Complete a minimum of 33 credit hours and 11 courses (not including co-requisites).
- Students must choose TWO Specializations, a Primary (15 hours) and a Secondary specialization (9 hours).
- Up to two courses from the General Education Themes section can be shared with the major. These courses must be from the two different Themes. Exceptions can be made for double majors. See an advisor for details.
- Students must earn a C- or higher in all courses in their major and have a minimum 2.0 grade point average in the major.

REVISIONS TO THE EMBEDDED LITERACIES REQUIREMENT

Under this revision, the unit is seeking to update the classes that can be used to fulfill the Embedded Literacies requirement.

The currently approved Embedded Literacy classes are:

Advanced Writing:

INTSTDS 4700      Terror and Terrorism
 INTSTDS 4852      Research in Globalization

Data Analysis:

INTSTDS 3400      The Analysis & Display of Data
 POLITSC 3780      Data Literacy & Data Visualization

Technology:

INTSTDS 3703      Ethical Issues in the Information Age
 INTSTDS 4701      Weapons of Mass Destruction

The revised listing of Embedded Literacy classes under this proposal are (with discussions):

Advanced Writing:

INTSTDS 4852      Research in Globalization

Given this is a Required Foundations course for all students in all specializations, the need for a second option does not exist.

Data Analysis (recent semesters of offering listed for courses outside of INTSTDS):

GEOG 4103      Introductory Spatial Data Analysis (SP23, AU22, SP22, AU21)
 INTSTDS 3400      The Analysis & Display of Data
 POLITSC 3780      Data Literacy & Data Visualization (SP23, AU22, SP22, AU21)
 SOCIOL 5650      Presenting and Communicating Quantitative Data (SP23, SP22)

The first three classes are already approved Embedded Literacy courses for their respective departments. The student will choose one class from the Methods & Analysis section to satisfy the EL Data Analysis requirement.

Technology (recent semesters of offering listed for courses outside of INTSTDS):

COMM 3554	Social Implications of Communication Technology (SP23, AU22, SP22, AU21)
INTSTDS 3703	Ethical Issues in the Information Age
INTSTDS 4701	Weapons of Mass Destruction
SOCIOL 3302	Technology & Global Society (SP23, AU22, SP22, AU21)

All courses are already approved Embedded Literacy classes for their respective departments.

The recent semesters of offering for Data Analysis and Technology are listed to confirm the classes are being offered on a regular basis. As an interdisciplinary unit, International Studies inquired other units as to their approved Embedded Literacy classes. Given our large number of specializations, and hence the varied interests of our students, we seek variety in the Embedded Literacy offerings available to our students.

It is worth noting that while the Embedded Literacies classes taught within UISP will regularly be assessed as to their efficacy, we cannot undertake such activity for the courses offered by other units. That said, in order to assure that sufficient course/seat availability is always present for students, we have made sure that EL courses of each type are offered directly by UISP, and have verified that EL courses offered by other departments will be (1) regularly available, and (2) open to UISP students.

EXAMPLE MAJOR

Primary Specialization:       International Relations & Diplomacy
Secondary Specialization:    Middle East Studies
Advanced Language:           French

ADVANCED LANGUAGE:

FRENCH 2101.01 Introduction to French & Francophone Studies (3)

REQUIRED FOUNDATIONS: 6 hours

INTSTDS 3850    Introduction to Globalization (3)

INTSTDS 4852    Research in Globalization (3) EL ADVANCED WRITING

METHODS & ANALYSIS: 3 hours

INTSTDS 3400    The Analysis & Display of Data (3) (EL DATA)

PRIMARY (International Relations & Diplomacy) SPECIALIZATION: 15 hours

GEOG 3701        Making of the Modern World (3)

HISTORY 3501    U.S. Diplomacy, 1920 – Present (3)

INTSTDS 3703    Ethical Issues in Information Technology (3) (EL TECH)

INTSTDS 4700    Terror & Terrorism (3)

POLSCI 4330     Global Governance (3)

SECONDARY (Middle East Studies) SPECIALIZATION: 9 hours

INTSTDS 2200    Introduction to the Middle East (3)

ISLAM 3501      Introduction to Islam (3)

NELC 3704       The Middle East in the Media (3)

7 Transition plan: students entering before Autumn 2023

Students admitted to the university before the Autumn 2023 semester will not be penalized as this new curriculum is implemented, either in terms of progress towards their degree or their expected date of graduation. Those admitted Summer 2022 and before will be responsible for major requirements that existed before the AU22 implementation of the GEN (New) and Embedded Literacy requirements.

Those admitted Autumn 2022 to Summer 2023 will be under the GEN and the Autumn 2022 major requirements that include the Embedded Literacy coursework. Those who enter the university Autumn 2023 and after will complete the eleven semester course requirements of the updated major being submitted under this proposal.

In the case of transfer students with much credit already earned, the evaluation of General Education classes and possible petition approval of being under the GEL (Legacy) General Education requirements will be considered. If the petition is approved for the student to be under the GEL General Education requirements, the student will be given the option to seek any of the three versions of the International Studies major in effect (that from SU22 and before, that from AU22 to SU23 with the Embedded Literacy requirements, and the approved new major that begins AU23).

APPENDIX A: Current & Proposed Advising Sheets

AFRICAN STUDIES – Current

African Studies Specialization
Segment / Course Number	Title	Credits	Grade
Required Pre-Major courses: 6-23 hours

Information Security Minor (INFOSEC-MN)

International Studies, 33 Townshend Hall, 1885 Neil Ave., Columbus, OH 43210-1222
614-292-9657; <http://internationalstudies.osu.edu>

Information security is the study of the dynamic interaction between the nature of cyber threats to the security, integrity and availability of information and the diverse efforts that are made to counter them.

The information security minor gives students a multidisciplinary perspective on the sources of, and reasons for, cyber threats and the strategies undertaken to counter them, including the role of computers and computing as well as that of laws, regulations and information storage standards and practices. Students are also introduced to successes and failures in protecting information against cyber attack through the detailed analysis of real-world case studies as well to the broader social, economic and security context in which cyber threats arise.

The information security minor requires 16 hours of academic credit.
